City looks at way to ease long delays at towers

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

CITY chiefs were set to tweak traffic arrangements around the Westgate Towers in a bid to alleviate some of the pressure its closing has caused.

The council met last night (Tuesday) to discuss the controversial decision to prevent traffic travelling beneath the historic archway.

Councillors were expected to look at an initial review on the environmental improvements and traffic management changes since the closure.

The review illustrates action taken to improve the seven key areas of complaint – such as changing traffic signal timings and additional signs and barriers. The council has received hundreds of complaints from angry residents about the new scheme.

The year-long trial looks to safe guard the towers and improve the air quality in the area.

But the congestion issues have blighted many and caused long delays during peak times.

The towers were regularly damaged by lorries and buses that squeezed through the ancient archway.

The review recommends a full public consultation period from July until September. This is expected to allow time for the traffic and air quality data to be fully assessed before councillors make a decision on whether the trial should continue.

Excitement builds as Lounge on the Farm festival tunes up

THE countdown is on for this year's Lounge on the Farm festival.

The event, which runs from July 6-8, will see acts like Emeli Sande, The Wombats and The Charlatans take to the stage in front of thousands.

And organisers say they are expecting another sell-out crowd this year, despite a packed summer schedule which has seen other festivals shelved.

After a string of issues last year that resulted in the event having to reapply for a licence for this summer, organisers have confirmed there will be a dramatic drop in the number of youth tickets available, with the dance music focus reduced and a shift back to being a festival suitable for all the family.

Founder Sean Baker explained: "We are going back to our roots this year.

"Last year we saw some youngsters not acting the way we would hope they would so we have taken steps to ensure no repeat of that."

Among the changes will be enhanced security on site and improved fences around the site's perimeter.

The three-day festival takes place at Merton Farm, off the Nackington Road. Parking restrictions will be in place to prevent a repeat of last year's traffic issues, while the city's schools say they will have officers on the site ensuring no teenager is missing lessons to attend the

Other acts performing include Chic, Dexys, Roni Size and Example.

In a special interview we look at how the festival responded to last year's challenges. See page 7.

ENVIRONMENT

Wave of reprisals after beaches hit by sewage leaks allowed to reopen

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

SEWAGE may have stopped being pumped into the sea, but it's started to hit the fan as Thanet faces up to the fallout from the pollution leak that closed all its beaches.

While business leaders are keen to move on from the incident, Southern Water is still facing the possibility of prosecution, and the town hall has been fiercely criticised.

The shores around Thanet reopened on Tuesday after water quality levels were deemed set by the Environment Agency, but nine days of closures damaged businesses and the isle's coastal reputation.

Raw sewage was pumped into the Channel on three separate occasions when Southern Water's Foreness Point plant was unable to cope with heavy rain after its pumping system failed and threatened to flood homes.

The sea was closed to bathers from Bank Holiday Monday, but Thanet South MP Laura Sandys accused the council of "failing to implement a proper action plan".

She said: "I have received numerous complaints from constituents over the lack of red flags or prominent warning signs on beaches. It is shocking that children swam in the sea over the weekend because families were unaware of the leaking sewage.

"Thanet District Council will need to consider how they can best improve their communication with the public."

However, the council's director of operational services, Mark Seed, said: "The safety of beach users is a priority and our work is dedicated to ensuring no-one has their health or well being compromised.

"By working closely with the Environment Agency we acted as swiftly and efficiently as we could. Cleansing crews and RNLI lifeguards were alerted immediately and teams were deployed at first light the next day to begin the major cleanup operation.

"Red flags were raised on all RNIJ lifeguarded beaches and initial signage was placed by Southern Water on all other non-lifeguarded beaches. To ensure the message was clear, the council then placed an additional 200 signs across the coastline and spoke directly with a number of beach concessions and businesses.

"Thanet is an area that is celebrated for its award-winning beautiful sandy beaches, so this incident in our eyes was completely unacceptable."

The reopening of the beaches has been welcomed by businesses, who say the closures could have hit the local economy to the tune of hundreds of thousands of pounds

President of Broadstairs and St Peter's Chamber of Commerce Malcolm Cox said: "At the moment, it is still fresh in the minds of people so there will be some who are reluctant to go down there with their kids, but give it a couple of weeks and people will be swarming again."

Southern Water said: "We are pleased the council has reopened the beaches for bathers. We continue to monitor the beach as part of the clean-up operation."

But the company may be in further trouble if the Environment Agency decides to prosecute it for dumping sewage into the sea without needing to.

Senior environment officer at the agency Jon Griffin said it was too early to discuss legal proceedings, and the investigation could take up to seven months.

He added: "We have got re-

He added: "We have got reassurances from Southern Water that this has been completely fixed and the station is running back to normal so it shouldn't overflow again."

He didn't believe there would be a long-term effect on the isle's sea as the polluted water has now diluted and dispersed.

Dad and son arsonists

A FATHER and son caught trying to set fire to Amco supermarket in Queen Street, Ramsgate, have been jailed. William Cairns, 58, and Ashley Cairns, 24, were caught by police pouring petrol through a broken window. Cairns senior, of Eaton Road, Margate, denied conspiracy to cause arson but was found guilty. Ashley Cairns, of Lewis Crescent, Cliftonville, admitted conspiracy to cause arson. William Cairns was jailed for four years and his son for two years and eight months.

Neighbours' meltdown

PROPOSALS for a nuclear waste storage facility on Romney Marsh have been opposed by neighbouring East Sussex County Council. Shepway District Council is consulting on plans to build an underground nuclear research and development facility. However, the leader of East Sussex council leader Peter Jones said: "We believe the plan doesn't stack up and has many unknowns including geology, economic benefit, infrastructure and community support."

➡Serial sex attacker

A MAN has been found guilty of sexually abusing eight victims over 40 years. James David Mitchell, 55, of Invicta Road, Sheerness, was found guilty at Maidstone Crown Court after a nine-week trial. Mitchell denied all 35 charges, but was found guilty of 26 offences. These included three charges of rape, eight of indecent assault, one of gross indecency, three of sexual activity with a child, and 11 other serious sexual offences. Police launched an investigation in December, 2010, when the first allegations against Mitchell were made. He will be sentenced at a later date.

Syrian dictator's sympathisers hack town councillor's website

A TOWN councillor who Tweeted messages calling for the conflict in Syria to end has been left stunned after his personal website was hacked, apparently by sympathisers of the Middle East regime.

A group calling itself Syria Storm took over the site which detailed Cllr Ben Hart's work for Lydd Town Council.

He was amazed someone thought his views were important enough to deserve the attack.

Cllr Hart, from Lydd, said: "I just don't understand it. I have spoken about Syria on Twitter, but mentioned nothing on my own website. I am not intimidated by the attack, and it has given me the chance to go back and redesign it as I was intending to do anyway."

ground, a picture of Syrian dictator President Bashar al-Assad, and the message that it had been "HaCk3d By Syrian Storm".

The webpage has since been removed with a message that it is down for maintenance.

The 23-year-old Labour councillor said: "I know I am not a threat to this regime so I wonder why I have been chosen for this attack.

"The Twitter comments I have made were simply to raise awareness of what is happening. "It is only what I said on Twitter that they took offence at. The attack just came out of the blue. Foreign secretary William Hague has said Syria is heading for civil war. British human rights observers are helping document the "grotesque crimes" of the Assad regime which are said to have included massacres of children.

Cameron hints at Heathrow U-turn that could scupper estuary airport

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE debate over a proposed airport in the Thames Estuary raged on this week with political heavyweights joinging the fight and Prime Minister David Cameron hinting at a controversial U-turn over plans for a third runway at Heathrow.

Former transport secretary Lord Adonis kickstarted the latest discussions during an international conference for the Institute of Travel and Tourism, where he branded the estuary airport plan a "non-starter"

The Labour peer said there were numerous problems with the proposal and warned the risk of bird strike could halt the process altogether.

Speaking at the conference in Barbados, he said the outlined cost of £50bn for architect Lord Foster's Isle of Grain plan was likely to double and that it would take a large amount of work to secure such funding.

He stressed that political parties should get around a table and seriously look at how to deal with the problem of airport capacity.

"They should set up an independent inquiry which would represent political parties and look at all three suggestions of a third runway at Heathrow, expansion at Gatwick and Stansted, or the Thames Estuary airport," he said.

Instead, the Government seems to be stalling over when the anticipated aviation review is going ahead.

Last month, this newspaper reported confusion in Whitehall, where neither the Department for Transport nor Kent's MPs knew when the review and consultation - which was initially planned for March but delayed - is to be held. Despite reports it will go ahead next month, the Government is yet to confirm a date and fears are mounting it could be postponed even longer.

With pressure from campaign groups and MPs, however, it is unlikely ministers can delay setting a date for too long.

The contentious aviation issue was raised again this week by MP for Richmond Park and North Kingston Zac Goldsmith, who threatened to resign should the Tory party support a third runway at Heathrow.

He questioned the Prime Minister in the House of Commons, calling for reassurance there would be no third runway. But Mr Cameron refused to rule out expansion.

The Prime Minister said: "While the Coalition's position has not changed, we must not be blind to considerations about how we expand airport capacity.

This is likely to give a glimmer of hope to campaigners fearful of plans for an estuary airport. If a third runway is built, a hub in the estuary is unlikely to go ahead.

Closer to home, a battle raged between Kent County Council and MP for Tonbridge and Malling Sir John Stanley.

The veteran Tory said KCC had gone against the party's commitment to oppose expansion at Gatwick.

In its recently launched Bold Steps for Aviation, KCC recommends the Government look at the possibility of a second runway at Gatwick af-

Sir John warned of the "environmentally devastating consequences" and the impact it would have on his west Kent constituents who live under the flight path.

In a letter to Tory leader Paul Carter, he said it was a matter of "deep disquiet and disappointment" and stressed the council should have waited for the outcome of the national review before releasing the document.

The council also came under fire from Kent Green Party for pushing ahead with its discussion document.

Campaigns officer Dr Hazel Dawe said the party was "unimpressed" that KCC had not waited for the results of the Government's consultation on aviation.

"It has launched its own discussion document, Bold Steps for Aviation, with remarkably little regard for domestic tourism in Kent and Medway or the environment," she said. "KCC proposes a massive plan of rail expansion to serve airports, when Kent commuters do not have enough carriages for weekday rush-hour travel.

"They propose expansion of Lydd and Manston Airports, despite economic problems at both. They support a second runway for Gatwick, despite the noise and pollution implications for west Kent. Their only restraint is in opposing an estuary airport.'

HIGHWAYS

Extra £6m to be spent on roads as KCC beats budget cut target

By Mariike Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

MILLIONS of pounds saved through cutbacks at County Hall will be invested in protecting roads following the prolonged spell of wet weather.

Highways chiefs at Kent County Council said the authority had to protect roads, particularly after the significant investment made to fix potholes caused by the big freeze in 2010.

It was agreed that £6 million would be added to the rolling budget reserve for highways from a forecast £16.2m under-spend – excluding schools spending – at the council, which is being saved as part of a four-year plan to save more than £300m.

"We've done excellent work with highways and if we don't consolidate that and this rotten weather continues, it could undermine all the work we've done," said cabinet member for finance, Cllr John Simmonds.

"We know that over the next two or three years we are going to have to manage on less money.

"It is absolutely important that we continue to be prudent. This isn't a spending spree, it's so we don't end up spending unnecessary money on potholes."

Members agreed that due to the prolonged spell of rain, the £6m should be put aside for roads to stop a backlog of maintenance work.

Cabinet member for highways Cllr Bryan Sweetland said it was pleasing more money was being invested in the network.

"Here in Kent we have 5,000 miles of roads and 7,000 of pave-saving of £6 million means more money can be spent to improve our roads amount to look at all of Kent's roads, but I think this is a good use of money and is welcomed."

Some £2m of the predicted under-spend is also to be set aside for investment in technology and communications to improve communication with the public.

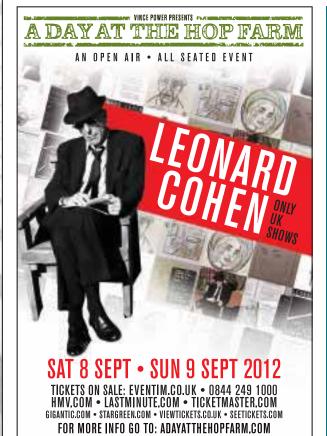

A business plan is due to be drawn up and, if successful, the funds will be used to implement the proposals. Early indications suggest that in the long term improved communications could save the authority as much as £20m.

Commenting on the under-spend and finance update, leader of KCC Cllr Paul Carter said: "The finance team has done extraordinarily well.

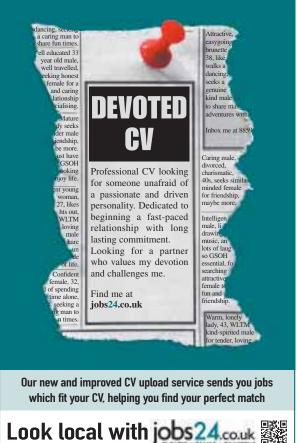

"There were a lot of sceptics at the beginning of the financial year who said our budget was undeliverable and that we wouldn't deliver it in line with expectations, but we've done that and a little more."

In an update on the council's finances it was revealed that so far 1,196 posts have been cut from the 1,500 anticipated over the four years.

Of those, 605 staff were made redundant.

LOUNGE ON THE FARM

Festival's new era after police row

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

THE founder of one of Kent's best-loved music festivals says he was close to throwing in the towel after police criticisms of its running last year.

And he says officers held him "to ransom", insisting both he and his co-founder stepped down from running Lounge on the Farm or see the plug pulled on the three-day extravaganza in Canterbury.

The festival, which ran without incident for five years before last summer's event, was $blasted\,by\,police\,who\,said\,there$ were an "extreme amount of incidents". Yet there were just 20 reported crimes in a crowd of 10,000. Although concerns were raised over the number of young drinkers on the site.

Coupled with issues about traffic around the venue at Merton Farm, police tried to get the event's licence revoked ahead of this year's event.

However, after months of negotiations, the festival secured permission to continue - but only after Sean Baker and his business partner Victoria Hazell agreed to step down and allow an outside production company to run the event.

It left Mr Baker fuming. He explained this week: "The negative headlines upset me. There were 20 reported crimes what the police described as a 100 per cent increase. That meant just 10 crimes the year before, but they blew it up like dents were things like lost mobile phones which people report as stolen so you can claim on your insurance. It was all blown out of proportion.

"The police said we couldn't run it anymore. So we said what about the previous five years when there's been no issue?

"We've had to get a production company in, which is more expense and really hurtful. The police put the blame on us - we

"What particularly upset me is we were told by a PC, not even someone high up, they wanted to get rid of the festival.

"It was only when the likes of MP Julian Brazier and the city council said it was a good But the police didn't want it.'

The police, however, say their only concern is safety.

Chief Inspector Steve Barlow, Canterbury District Commander, said: "We are very supportive of the wide range of events in the district, but we have a duty to ensure they are planned and managed appropriately to maximise safety and minimise any negative impact.

"There were a number of problems at, and linked to, last year's event which caused us concern, and therefore we requested a review of the licence.

"We have worked with the organisers and, as a result, they have addressed the concerns raised and we are confident they are planning a safe and well managed event.

JUBILEE

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A PHOTO mosaic of the Queen that is the size of a double-decker bus is on display this weekend.

The incredible artwork was created by Helen Marshall for BBC South East Today to celebrate the Jubilee.

It will be on show at Margate's Turner Contemporary, which is one of the few galleries in Kent big enough to cope with the sheer size of the piece.

It will be less than a year since the Queen herself visited the new gallery.

The artwork is made up of more than 50,000 photos sent in by viewers. Using the basic colour of the snap, Marshall used a special computer programme to map out the pictures to create images of the Queen as she is now, and as she was during the coronation.

The work is called The People's Monarch.

One person who donated a picture is Philippa Wilson from New Romney. She sent in a photograph which captured the moment when she was reunited with her husband, Private Paul Wilson, on his return from six months' duty in Afghanistan.

She said: "The photo captures the emotion of our first hug. I feel it would be a wonderful addition to your mosaic as he had just returned from fighting for Queen and country and is very patriotic."

And third generation British Indian Baljit Balrow, from Maidstone, sent in a picture of herself wearing traditional Indian jewellery, with a Union Jack painted on her face. Baljit said: "I want this picture to represent our proud multicultural Britain. No matter how much you adapt to another culture, it doesn't mean you lose your cultural roots."

Vicki Berry, producer for BBC South East Today, said: "Thousands of people submitted family portraits, photos of their ancestors, snaps of important occasions in their lives and of times that made them laugh. Many used the opportunity to remember loved ones they had lost, sharing precious memories.

"Stand up close to our portrait and you will see a mass of touching, funny or inspirational photos – step back 20 paces and it transforms to become a double portrait of the Queen."

The work is on show at Turner Contemporary on Saturday and Sunday.

On Wednesday a large pink ribbon appeared on top of the gallery as part of the first phase of officially dressing the county for the Cultural Olympiad, Torch Relay and the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

CONSERVATION

Twin cubs offer a lifeline for future of rare leopards

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

TWO rare leopard cubs have been born at the Big Cat Sanctuary.

The twin Amur leopard cubs were born in Smarden on May 22 as part of an endangered species breeding programme.

Amur leopards are near extinction, with only 30 to 35 left in the wild, and 100 in captivity.

The sanctuary, run by the Wildlife Heritage Foundation, is planning to organise a fundraiser to name the cubs, believed to be a boy and a girl – but their sex is still not certain.

The cub's mother, seven-yearold Xizi, arrived at the sanctuary in 2009 from Helsinki Zoo in Finland.

She is part of the European Endangered Species Program designed to ensure the genetic diversity of rare animals when their numbers are in steep decline.

Headkeeper Rebecca Porter, said:

"The introduction of a mate is a very risky process that can potentially lead to the male killing the female. But we gradually introduced Xizi to her new partner, Hogar, in an adjacent enclosure back in February. It soon became obvious they were very keen on each other through the wire. When we opened the gate between them, they hit it off immediately."

Ms Porter said when Xizi went into labour staff monitored her on a camera fitted to her nesting box.

She added: "Seeing her give birth was an overwhelming experience that will stay with me forever. It's such an important event and I'm so lucky to have witnessed it."

The birth is significant as both the parents have a good genetic makeup for the species.

A spokesperson from the Big Cat Sanctuary said: "The numbers in the wild have deteriorated to a point that they couldn't be closer to extinction than they are.

CUTE CUBS: The newborns are key to the survival of the Amur species

"In the wild, the population is split into pockets meaning that even though there are 35 or so, the situation is even graver. The largest population is around 15 cats and they are unable to mingle with the other populations, leading to the threat of genetic pooling.

"Hence the programme to release them back into the wild becomes even more important."

Father to the twins, five-year-old

Hogar, could be moved from the sanctuary to mate with another female, but it is possible he may stay and have another litter with Xizi.

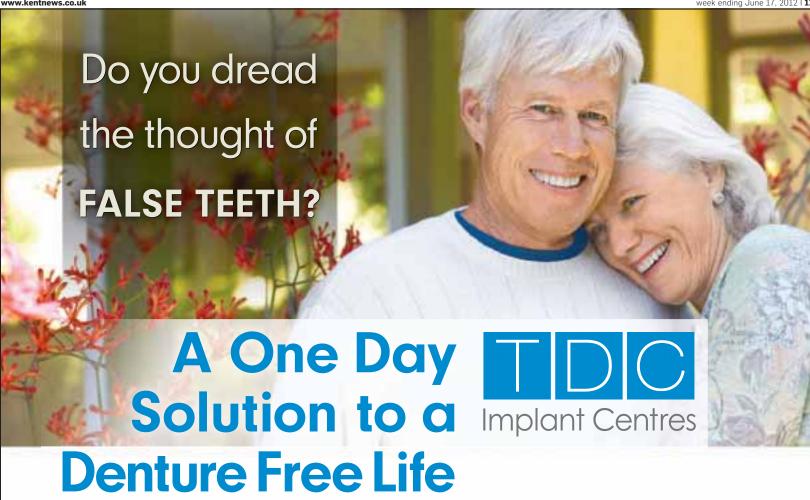

The cubs are likely to be moved to a different park to be bred from as they are related to the leopards at the sanctuary.

Two serval kittens have also been born at the sanctuary this week.

TV funnyman will have them rolling in the (church) aisles

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TOP TV comedian Tim Vine is peforming at an unusual venue – a seaside church.

Vine, star of BBC One's Not Going Out and several sell out shows at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival, will be appearing before an audience of just 300 at Queen's Road Baptist Church in Broadstairs.

The show will help raise money for the church's revamp.

Asked how they won him over to appear in Broadstairs, Rev J Brian Curtis said: "We just got in touch with him."

He added: "Tim goes around the country doing this sort of show in various places. He would profess to be a Christian, and I approached him and he said yes.

"We have just revamped our building – a £2 million rebuilding project and we now have a church/auditorium that seats 300 to 350 in a modern setting.

"We have Paul and Fiona Jones recently, from Manfred

GOING OUT: Comedian Tim Vine

Mann, and this is just another contact.

"I just go in touch with Tim using email and he said yes."

The reverend refused to say if Vine is being paid for the onehour show saying: "That's between us and him. He lives in Banstead which is not far away and he is prepared to do this show for us to help us raise funds for our building."

Vine, king of the corny oneliners, will be doing part of the show he performed at last year's Edinburgh Festival.

The Tim Vine Chat Show features 'guests' who are volunteers from the audience with whom he is spontaneously witty after warming up with his trademark rapid-fire salvoes of silliness.

The church said the Kent performance is part of his part of his fine tuning for a repeat at this year's Edinburgh Festival.

A limited number of tickets for the show are available at £10 each and can be obtained from Queens Road Baptist Church, Broadstairs, telephone 01843 602762, or email churchoffice@qrbc.net

The show is on Saturday, July 14, at 7.30pm.

Kent County Show promises rural fun for all the family

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE Kent County Show is promising something for everyone, with arena displays, food, prize-winning livestock, a feast of flowers and even the chance to fly with a Spitfire.

Next month's show boasts new additions including Dash 'n' Splash, a long jump competition over water for dogs; a beer and cider festival with local brews and a German-style bierkeller: a 4x4 off-road track: and children's woodland workshops from Kent Wildlife Trust.

The event is at Kent Showground, Detling, Maidstone, from July 13-15, 8am-6pm, Friday-Sunday. It is organised by the Kent County Agricultural Society, and attracts more than 80,000 visitors to one of the UK's major countryside, farming and produce events.

The range of animals is a major draw and its equine and livestock judging attracts large numbers of entrants and spectators.

Special guests will be Secretary of State for the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Caroline Spelman, on Friday; TV presenter Adam Henson will be there on the Saturday; and TV legend John Craven will visit on Sunday.

Arena displays include the Bolddog Lings motorcycle display team, an historic vehicle display, the Band of the 24th Invicta Rifles, and parades of bloodhounds and beagles.

Special events include the chance to fly in a helicopter alongside a Spitfire as it takes to the skies over the showground on the Friday.

Another major feature is the Flower Tent with renowned horticultural exhibitors demonstrating their expert growing and nurturing skills, with displays of roses, fuchsias, succulent, carnivorous plants, shrubs, ferns, and much more.

The agricultural area is home to Why Farming Matters In Kent, which offers information about local produce, careers and training in agriculture. Visitors will be able to see sheep-shearing and cattle, horses and goats.

Tickets can be bought at www.kentshowground.co.uk or on 01622 633060.

Kent Showground executive manager Roger Moore said: "With popular attractions returning and new events making their debuts, the Kent County Show has something for everyone. We would urge people to book their tickets as soon as possible and secure their place at Kent's most exciting event of the year.'

Heavy rains see hosepipe ban lifted - for some of us

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TWO of Kent's water firms have lifted their hosepipe bans.

Thames Water covers a tiny slither of Kent around the Edenbridge area, while Southern Water supplies the areas around Medway, Gravesend, Sheppey, Thanet, and the east Kent villages between Canterbury and Deal.

On Thursday both companies lifted the bans that have been in place since April 5 following two exceptionally dry years.

Since the drought restrictions were imposed, the county has experienced sustained heavy rainfall, including the wettest April on record.

Southern Water's main reservoir at Bewl, near Lamberhurst, is now 81 per cent full and even the more essential

LIFTED: Two firms have now cancelled their hosepipe bans underground supplies have been slightly replenished.

Water quality and strategy manager Meyrick Gough, said: "Supplies are now in a much stronger position. However, with the underground sources. which supply the majority of customers, still below average, we are asking customers to continue to use water wisely."

Kent's other water suppliers, including South East, are still seriously worried about underground levels in aquifers, by far the largest resource in Kent.

It said that while recent rainfall boosted river and reservoir levels, it has had little impact on the region's groundwater sources, many of which remain at "severe" levels.

South East Water said as these provide 75 per cent of all supplies it is not able to remove the hosepipe ban.

Asset director Paul Seeley said: "Water companies must stick to the drought management plans agreed with regulators. Just as those companies who are now in a position to withdraw their restrictions will be following theirs, so must we comply with ours.'

Veolia South East is also keeping its ban, because of worries about underground supplies.

Mike Pocock, water resources manager said: "We will need substantial rainfall to move us out of a drought."

Olympics wins legacy gold before a race is even started

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AS the county sprints towards the Olympic starting line, the achievements notched up so far are already podium placed.

The impressive list is pure gold.

The South East Partnership said it runs to 243 business contracts; 11 Inspire projects with 14 cultural Inspire Mark projects; 529 Get Set schools with tickets; 10 pre-Games training camps in Kent and four in Medway; evening torch celebration sites in Dover and Maidstone; plus 38 Olympic Torch Relay Communities en route.

The revelations come in a document called South East Leading the Way to mark the culmination of six years' work in the lead up to the Games.

Those behind the report say it will also form part of a framework for partners and stakeholders to keep the spirit of the Games alive once the competitors have gone home said: "The Olympic and Paralympic Games have already captured the inspiration of the nation, which has been proved by the outstanding achievements in Kent and Medway and the rest of the South East over the past six years.

Oona Muirhead of LOCOG

BUILD: Stadium construction

"We are keen to make sure this legacy lives on long after London 2012 and we are certain we have all the right people and plans in place to maintain our achievements."

There are nine areas of legacy focus: sport, health, education, culture, accessibility, skills, tourism, business contracts, and training camps.

The document demonstrates the all-round impact the work has made in the South East, highlighting some of the region's most successful campaigns and initiatives.

Sport England in the South East has also announced £8 million of National Lottery funding to help disabled people start playing sport.

More than 8,500 employees in Kent and the South East have been trained through joint initiatives by Tourism South East and the Skills Funding Agency to improve customer service to encourage return visits to the region.

Marinos Paphitis, executive director for the Skills Funding Agency in the South said: "The 2012 Games have provided a unique opportunity to further build the wide range of skills of those in the South East to support the event and its legacy both economically and socially."

NHS launching 111 phone service for urgent medical help

ACCIDENT

Car comes off road and crashes into tree

A DRIVER is in intensive care after his car collided with a tree near Dartford on Monday night. A 32-year-old man was taken to King's College Hospital in London after his black Ford Mondeo left the road on Longfield Hill, went down an embankment and collided with a tree. Kent Police would like to speak to two good Samaritans in a white van who helped at the scene before the police arrived.

No half measures in booze crackdown day

CRACKDOWN on nuisance drinkers in Chatham town centre saw booze seized from seven people in one day. It was part of a move by the police's new Community Safety Partnership initiative to tackle problem drinking. As well as taking alcohol, officers issued four people with Section 27 directions to leave the town centre. All four allegedly breached the directions and were summonsed to appear in court.

A NON-emergency number is being introduced in Kent for people who want medical help, but don't need an ambulance.

But be warned, the 111 number is not being switched on until next April.

And health chiefs believe people won't be confused with the police 101 number for urgent, but not emergency, calls.

HELP: From next April 111 will be the number to call for non-urgent help

Currently, there are a host of medical organisations available to give vital advice on the phone, but remembering all their numbers can be a problem.

The system has been greatly simplified and anyone needing urgent medical help, but not for an emergency, can dial 111 from next year.

It is a free health service to make it easier for people in Kent and Medway to get urgent healthcare 24/7, and residents will get reminders closer to April to let them know when the service becomes active. It is being provided by a partnership between South East Coast Ambulance Service NHS Foundation Trust and Harmoni, an independent provider of urgent services in England. They won the contract beating three other companies.

If you dial 111 from April, a trained call handler, supported by health professionals, will provide a clinical assessment at the first point of contact, without the caller having to wait for a call back.

Ann Sutton, chief executive of NHS Kent and Medway, said: "This is an important step in our journey towards providing patients in Kent and Medway with a single point of access for all urgent healthcare services. I look forward to working with SECAmb and Harmoni to make 111 a reality and to making local urgent health services easier to navigate for our patients.'

And Dr Mark Jones, a GP in Canterbury, added: "I am delighted we now know who our partner is for providing the 111 service, which will make urgent care better for our local patients.

"Over the coming months we will be working closely with SECAmb and Harmoni to prepare for the start of the 111 service by April, 2013.'

The contracts should be signed by the end of the month, and then the work starts to have everything in place before the launch date.

Kent police currently uses the national line 101, a similar number for non-emergencies when help is needed but not urgent.

The Association of Chief Police Officers said: "101 is a non-emergency number. In cases of emergency the public should always call 999.

"There have been a number of publicity campaigns promoting the 101 number to ensure it is clear to the caller when and how it should be used. 101 call handlers are highly trained and will assess every call they receive.

"If the call should be re-directed to another emergency service, they will be aware of the best way to do this.

Switchover ushers in a new digital dawn for TV viewers

By Marijke Cox

mariike.cox@archant.co.uk

THE end of the analogue age has arrived with Kent joining the rest of the country in switching to digital TV.

Viewers who have fo far shunned digital TV are joining the high-tech revolution, giving them more channels and, for those in reception black spots, improved picture quality.

Switchover in Kent started last month with terrestrial TV signals turned off at the Tunbridge Wells transmitter.

On Wednesday, the rest of the county began the switchover, with transmitters at Dover and Bluebell Hill turned off. They served households in south, east, north and mid-

It means homes previously only able to access four or five channels through an analogue aerial had to get a digital box to allow them to pick up Freeview channels from BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and Channel 5, such as BBC Three and ITV2.

REVOLUTION: The digital age

Homes which had already gone digital, using Freeview, BT Vision or Top-Up TV, needed to re-tune their TV and boxes in order to regain their BBC services - or be faced with a blank screen.

They will also need to retune on Wednesday, June 27, when the switchover in Kent is completed.

Digital UK, a not-for-profit organisation formed by broadcasters to help customers convert to digital TV, said the switchover will allow a greater choice of channels, new features such as audio description and subtitling, and optional additional channels and services, including broadband.

Most households will be able to receive more than 40 Freeview channels via an aerial and the remainder around 15 popular channels.

A Digital UK spokesman said: "Switchover will make Freeview available to thousands of homes in the county for the first time.'

MP for South Thanet Laura Sandys, who has been campaigning for improved TV reception in her constituency, urged households to get in touch if they experienced problems during the switchover.

She said: "I have met with the minister responsible on several occasions to discuss this and he pledged to ensure everything is done to support us locally.

"Over the next few weeks, I'll be sending out information on switchover as well as asking for opinions on whether the signal has improved.'

■ There is a full guide to the switchover and how to retune your TV at www. kentnews.co.uk.

Band with a single vision to release a CD every month

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WRITING the right song for a single is a tough job, which is why one band has set themselves the daunting task of coming up with 12 of them this year.

Folkestone group Phenomenal Cat wanted to heap the pressure on themselves to come up with a dozen power pop songs to release one a month to both promote themselves and raised cash for local charities.

raised cash for local charities.

The project is called 'Post-cards from the British Empire'.

January's singe called Letters Home From Nazi-Occupied France was picked up by an influential pop blogger in Sweden who described their music as, "delectable slices of power pop".

They have also been compared with The Kinks and Blur.

Since then things have really taken off for the four-piece with their songs being played on radio shows in America, Spain, Germany and Sweden, as well as local radio stations across the IIK.

SINGLE: The hand's May release

Phenomenal Cat are photography lecturer Samuel Carney on guitar and vocals; as is Mik Pierson; Natalie Kuroczycki on bass guitar; and drummer Ben Day.

Samuel, 33, said: "We wanted to put pressure on ourselves to complete this project. It can be really difficult coming up with a great single and we want to do 12 in a year by forcing ourselves to come up with one a month.

"It is hard, but we are up to the job, and the singles released so far have done pretty well.

"We are doing it to promote ourselves of course, but to also raise money for charity by selling a limited run of 25 handmade CD singles.

"We then donate the money to a different charity shop in the Folkestone area each month. So far we have raised money for the Salvation Army, British Red Cross, Barnardo's, and Pilgrims Hospice."

The five singles so far are Letters Home, Ramshackle Heart, Postcards from the British Empire. Love on the Dole, and Electricity and Volts.

The sixth single is out on June 23, the day they play live on the Folkestone Bandstand, along with other bands from the area starting at 2pm.

Samuel said: "We love doing

Samuel said: "We love doing this, and although we are all in our 30s juggling work with families, we are dedicate to the band as well. It's great fun, and the pressure is part of that enjoyment."

The free download singles are available at www.phenomenalcat.bandcamp.com.

POLICINO

Tories to choose police chief poll candidate this weekend

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE final hurdle in the race to become the Conservative candidate in the upcoming Police and Crime Commissioner election has arrived.

Three candidates whittled down from a list of six hopefuls will go head to head during the final husting in Rochester this weekend following two earlier hustings, one in Tonbridge last week and another in Canterbury on Friday.

A decision is expected to be made on Sunday.

The three hopefuls are Medway councillor and former Ukip leader Craig Mackinlay; ex-police officer Jan Berry who ran the Police Federation for several years; and European Strategy Advisor to Kent Police Francois Gordon.

The successful candidate will then stand in the election on November 15 against a Labour hopeful – either Ashford councillor Harriet Yeo or Steve Bates, former advisor to Home Secretary John Reid, depending on who the party chooses – and a list of independent candidates.

These include former Mayor of Medway Dai Liyanage; Ken Little, from Whitstable; former Kent police officer Fran Croucher; and property tycoon Fergus Wilson, from Maidstone.

The PCC will replace Kent Police Authority (KPA) and will serve a four-year term, with power to hold the force to account, determine a policing strategy, and hire and fire the chief constable.

Tory candidate Cllr Mackinlay said the new directly elected PCC is the right route. "Current oversight of Kent Police is administered by the KPA.

"It is a well balanced body with committed appointees; but therein is the problem – the majority of members are appointed by the political groups across Kent and Medway councils.

"The independent members have applied for and have been selected by the body itself – there has been no public involvement in the appointments. In the administration of £274m of Kent taxpayers' funds and the setting of a legally enforceable precept, I believe that a directly elected person is the right route to link tax-raising with the public."

Senior Tory at County Hall Cllr Bryan Sweetland, who missed out on a place in the shortlist after putting himself forward, said the party was fortunate to have three good candidates.

"The task for Conservative members is now to pick one of these three. A difficult task as all could do the job, with varying degrees of competence, skill and effectiveness.

"I will make my mind up after listening to all three potential candidates this weekend."

But he questioned the selection process. Writing for this newspaper this week, he said: "One has to wonder why all Conservative members in Kent were not asked for their opinion from the start."

"Please Help"

Frankie is a 2 year old Tom cat missing since Friday 1st June in the Sydenham Street area of Whitstable.

He is rather fat, is short black haired with a small white spot on this throat. He has a blue sparkly collar on saying he is chipped but no name tag unfortunately.

He doesn't ever stray so we think he must be trapped in a garage, shed etc probably nearby.

We are desperately worried and would like to ask the local community to help us find him by checking their garages, shed, out buildings etc.

We are offering a £100 reward for his safe return

The controversial finding at the heart of medical history

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ONLY a virtual heretic would think a human heart could be important in keeping our bodies alive by pumping blood.

Merely suggesting something quite so outrageous would get you virtually kicked out of medicine, and described as a fool – as everyone knew that job was done by the liver.

But the Folkestone medic who gave his name to Ashford's main hospital was not about to let his peers decry his amazing work to prove the blood circulation in the body was driven by the heart.

It may not have helped that he was born on April 1, either. It seems absurd today, but William Harway etimed a major William Harvey stirred a major controversy way back in the 16th and 17th centuries with his claims.

Born in 1578 and passing away at the then-incredible age of 79, Harvey eventually conquered the many doubters.

He was a small man, but brilliant, and his work is now celebrated in a new book called Circulation: William Harvey's Revolutionary Idea, by Thomas Wright.

Despite the shaky start, Harvey went on to have a huge impact on anatomy and modern biology, and is heralded almost as highly as Isaac Newton and Charles Darwin.

In fact the author said of him: "He is arguably the great-

Harvey's medical breakthrough est Englishman in the history of science."

Harvey's obsessive quest to understand the movement of the blood overturned beliefs held by anatomists and physicians since Roman times. His circulation theory was as controversial in its day as Copernicus' idea that the Earth revolved around the Sun.

Harvey, whose father Tom was once mayor of Folkestone, was educated first in the town, and later at The King's School, Canterbury, before going on to study at Cambridge.

From there, it was on to France, Germany, and then the University of Padua, Italy, where he excelled and graduated as a doctor aged 24. Among one of his chief discoveries was that 'bloodletting' was completely useless, yet the practise routinely continued for two centuries after its 'benefits' were disproved by Harvey.

The book is set deep in the beating heart of late Renaissance London, and Mr Wright's vivid and visceral biography details Harvey taking inspiration from his dissections and vivisections.

Harvey got the attention of Sir Francis Bacon, England's Lord Chancellor and a patient; John Donne, a poet and preacher fascinated with anatomy and the human heart; and even King Charles I, Harvey's patron and a witness to his experiments.

The book charts Harvey's remarkable rise as a mere yeoman's son to the position of King's physician.

Mr Wright said: "It offers a fresh interpretation of his ideas, and above all, celebrates a brilliant mind that epitomized a rich moment in England's intellectual history."

He said Harvey set out on an obsessive quest to understand the movement of the blood and his work even altered the culture and language of its time, influencing poets and economists.

The book is published by Chatto & Windus and is also available as an ebook.

OPINION

It's down to the best of three

Cllr Bryan Sweetland runs the rule over the three candidates vying to represent the Tories in the race to be Police and Crime Commissioner

NOW that the list of hopefuls to be the Conservative candidate for the job of Police and Crime Commissioner (PCC) has been reduced to three, one has to wonder why all Conservative Party members in Kent were not asked for their opinion from the start.

You could argue that a better way to select our candidate, whilst simultaneously engaging and galvanising our supporters, would have been to offer each paid-up member

Despite this, we are where we are and if our supporters are able or prepared to travel to Rochester or Canterbury this weekend, they will be able to see the final three candidates perform.

The candidates can expect to answer questions on policing and crime, their reasons for standing and for how long have they been a member of the Conservative Party.

As Mark Reckless MP so descriptively explained on his website, we have Craig Mackinley, a finance whizz who is a local Medway councillor and an ex-UKIP leader; François Gordon, who is a Foreign Office man and ex-British Ambassador; and Jan Berry who ran the Police Federation the police equivalent of a trade union.

She has recently joined the Conservative Party after announcing that she was to stand as an independent.

The task for Conservative members is now to pick one of these three.

A difficult task as all could do the job, with varying degrees of competence, skill, and effectiveness.

The police, if they had a say (but they don't) would probably prefer Francois Gordon, a steady, reliable and safe pair of hands.

Medway Conservatives will no doubt vote for their own man Cllr Craig Mackinley, a member of the Kent Police Authority (an organisation he is hoping to replace as the Police and Crime Commissioner).

Kent's parliamentarians, with the exception of the three that attended the first selection meeting, seem to be showing little interest in this radical piece of Government policy.

At the initial selection meeting, the local party chairman and deputies were invited to cast three votes each.

association Surprisingly, members will also be given three votes to cast in order of preference, which sounds very Lib Dem.

Whatever happened to first past the post?

We are fortunate to have difficult task as all three could do the job

three very good candidates, I particularly like Gordon Francois's commitment to strip out the over-dependence on performance targets and the excessive supervision of the police put in place by the previous Labour government.

He he also recognises the bureaucratic load on the police must be lightened and he makes the point for more neighbourhood police on our streets, a pledge that the electorate will welcome.

I believe Francois Gordon will do a professional job but more importantly will allow the police to do theirs. However, I will make my mind up after listening to all three potential candidates this weekend. Good luck to them all.

The voting system in place may suprise us all!

Cllr Bryan Sweetland is deputy chairman of Gravesham Conservatives.

Sewage leak must not stain isle's reputation

ASIDE from a giant, man-eating shark called Jaws, it's every seaside resorts' worst nightmare - raw sewage being pumped into the sea.

And for the Isle of Thanet, which is dependant on summer trade brought in by its picturesque bays, the horror seemed to only get worse, with council chiefs forced to close the beaches for nine days.

The only lucky thing in this whole sorry mess is that Bank Holiday, in keeping with tradition, was a washout and visitor numbers would have been down.

It's quite right that someone needs to be held accountable, not only was this dangerous to people's health, there's the lingering threat of a stain on the isle's reputation.

Say no to same sex marriage

AN open letter to David Cameron: The Church and State must not divorce. I cannot believe what is happening in this once great Britain.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Catholic Church, and the likewise feeling millions are all correct in their assertions. You wish us all to believe you value your meeting with the Queen. I have every confidence her counsel would be in agreement. Marriage is simply one man and one woman, nothing else.

It is not too late. Changing your mind, or reneging on a commitment is not new to you - but you must act now.

Coast opening is good news

I was pleased to see the news that sections of the East Kent/ East Sussex coast will finally be open to the public by 2015.

We have some of the most beautiful coastline in the British Isles and it is such a shame we can't always enjoy it as we should be able to. All credit should go to Kent Ramblers Association and Natural England for this victory. I look forward to the opportunity to experience and enjoy the route.

Where were our parties?

WHILE most of the UK celebrated the Queen's Jubilee with countless street parties, where were the ones in Sittingbourne?

In Milton we have a good recreation park that would have been an ideal site to host an event, yet none was seen.

We elect councillors to carry out business on our behalf and these councillors have access to funds which could be used for such an event. Why did they not take advantage of this celebration to inject some much-needed community spirit into the area? Most residents, including me, do not have the finance or backing to organise such an event.

Also what about the area of apparent dereliction north of Sittingbourne's main station? Are our councillors lazy, just waiting for someone else to come up with some money, or are they totally incompetent?

We have been hearing about the Tesco project for the last million years – well it seems like that - and still no action. Is this ever going to happen? I very much doubt it.

Now the councillors have wrangled themselves to stay in power for four-year stints, rather than an election every year, it looks as if we will have to wait another three years to pass our opinion on these incompetent councillors.

If residents want councillors to do work then they should either: a) Vote Loony, b) Stand themselves, c) Bring back John Burke and Elvie Lowe.

Hypocrisy of animal lovers

IT is often said Britain is a nation of animal lovers but reality does not bear this out.

We own animals, we use them, we exploit them, we eat them but does that add up to love? Sanctuaries are filled with horses, cats, dogs, birds and reptiles - all 'loved' until the novelty wore off.

Investigations consistently find appalling conditions on farms and routine illegal abuse inside UK slaughterhouses

We still send live animals by sea to be killed in other countries. We still permit the breeding of millions of pheasants in battery-style cages merely to be shot from the sky for pleasure. We cull any animal or bird perceived to be a nuisance and there is still support, albeit diminishing, for events that routinely kill animals, most notably the Grand National.

To truly be a nation of animal lovers, all of this should be addressed.

Kate Fowler Animal Aid, Tonbridge

a good thing

REGARDING your piece on this new estuary airport, with Foster planning it the results should be good.

Thousands of jobs created would be good for the area. With the airport being able to operate 24 hours a day it would take a lot of noise away from around Heathrow.

We should support this and not bury our heads in the sand. Let's get this country moving again. DS Fox, Maidstone

Of course there will be local iobs

I think last week's contributor letter alleging there would be no jobs created for local people was insulting to the hard working people of Medway.

Apart from the initial construction, there would be thousands of opportunities of employment, not all of which would be skilled.

At any busy international airport there are vast numbers of staff required such as baggage handlers, cleaners, check-in staff and retail outlets, and I expect even a man flying a bird of prey to keep the birds off.

House prices would double and the whole of Medway would boom. The proposed site has been used for industrial use in the past, ranging from cement works to explosive factories.

I am always amused when people talk about concreting over the countryside when they probably live in a house on the very countryside they now want to protect.

K Smith, Rainham

Hub would be a catastrophe

I feel compelled to register my oposition to the proposed airport. The idea is wrong on every level and will catastrophically effect the area.

Those who champion the scheme don't live in or near the area, they dont give a hoot about the area and so will not be adversely affected. They are interested only in having their names associated with a mammoth project.

Local infrastructure cannot cope and the changes needed to address the resulting problem will cost millions we don't have.

I can only assume they have not heard there is a double dip recession at the moment.

Please urge them to get their heads out of the sand and think before they engage in a plan that is doomed to failure.

It cannot be allowed to go ahead. There are other options which the planners simply don't want to consider.

This area is far too precious to be buried in concrete.

Liability risk for debt on a joint bank account

My daughter shared a flat with a friend at university. They each paid into a special bank account for rent and other expenses. The friend should have closed the account when my daughter left, but it appears she carried on using it and ran up an overdraft of several hundred pounds before disappearing. Can the bank make my daughter pay?

The paperwork you sent me shows that your daughter and her friend had a joint account. Each was individually liable if the account went overdrawn, even if the other signatory was to blame. Legally, I am afraid your daughter can be made to pay, though in circumstances like this I have seen the bank accept a smaller sum in settlement, or payment over a long period.

I have received a text message on my phone, saying: "Records passed to us show you are entitled to a refund of approximately £2,560 in compensation from misselling of PPI on your credit card or loan." I am asked to reply for more information or to stop future messages. Is this a scam?

The message will have come from a claims management company, or from a sales firm representing one. It could be a scam, to persuade you to send an upfront fee in the hope of getting thousands of pounds, only to find later that the firm has disappeared with your cash. But it is more likely that this is an attempt to squeeze money out of your bank.

Since you have no idea who sent the message, ask yourself how they know you ever had payment protection insurance (PPI), how they know it was mis-sold to you, and how they got their hands on your credit records.

The fact is that whoever texted you knows none of these things. Identical texts will have been sent to thousands of people. If anyone does respond, the claims firm will file a demand with their bank, alleging PPI mis-selling. Since it costs banks hundreds of pounds to defend such allegations, the claims firm hopes the bank will make an offer, just to avoid legal costs, even if the claim is unjustified.

I have had an unsolicited telephone call, suggesting I invest in bonds issued by Forward Telecoms, with a yield of 7-9 per cent based on investing for between one and three years. If the company is successful there will also be a free share issue. I am told the company is Swedish, and in the current climate the yields look attractive, but this seems too good to be true.

According to its website, Forward Telecoms is a major business in Sweden, but things just don't add up. The website is marked as copyright from 2004 to 2011, but inquiries show the site was registered only in February last year, and will expire in February next year. It is an odd company that registers its name for only two years.

On top of this, the site is registered to addresses in Lisbon and New York rather than, say, Stockholm. Forward Telecoms may well be able to explain all this, so let's give it the benefit of the doubt. But however respectable it might be, do not buy its bonds.

Never invest in anything offered in an unsolicited call from a firm you do not already know.

When my 83-year-old husband was a boy, his father took out a policy for him with the Preston Shelley Friendly Society. In 2004, my husband received a letter asking whether he wanted to encash his policy. We eventually replied to the company in Manchester last year, asking for the proceeds, but the letter was returned. Can you help?

The Preston Shelley was a very old savings and life company. Its policies are now administered by the Scottish Friendly Assurance Society, whose headquarters are at 16 Blythswood Square, Glasgow G2 4HJ.

I have just received my income tax PAYE coding for 2012-13. This says I am entitled to the married couple's allowance, which is worth £770.50, represented by a tax allowance of £7,705. Last year, though, the same phrase turned £729.50 into £3,648. Have the allowances changed or has something gone wrong?

The married allowance has changed, but there is also a bit of a puzzle. The allowance you get is for people born before April 6, 1935, and it is at a fixed rate of 10 per cent. So £7,705 in tax allowances is worth £770.50 in cash. Last year the allowance was £7,295, worth £729.50 in cash.

Why you received a tax allowance of £3.648 – just half of the normal £7.295 – is the puzzle, and only your tax office can explain why it cut the usual allowance in two.

Be prepared to enjoy a worry-free festival

Lounge on the Farm, Hop Farm... it's festival time. But make sure you're prepared before setting out for a weekend of fun, says ADAM AIKEN

THE music festival season has arrived, with hundreds of thousands of fans preparing to travel to gigs, both here and across Europe.

But whether it's you getting ready to let your hair down or you are helping your children prepare for a festival, it's worth taking some time to make sure you are properly insured, to sort out a budget and – if you are heading to the Continent – to do a bit of extra homework.

Insure your possessions

Festivals can offer easy pickings for criminals looking to help themselves, especially if you are camping.

Aviva, the insurer, has calculated that the average value of possessions taken by festival-goers is more than £900. This might sound a lot at first glance, but when you take into account the proliferation of smartphones. MP3 players and digital cameras, and add the value of essentials such as tents, camping gear and clothes, things soon add up.

Although the odds are that you will not become a victim of crime, those who are targeted could find themselves substantially out of pocket if they do not have adequate insurance cover.

"Festivals are a brilliant staple of the summer calendar and it's obviously a chance for people to enjoy their favourite bands in the Sun (or rain) with their friends," said Jonathan Cracknell, household underwriter at Aviva. "But like any event with crowds all carrying expensive gear, there is a risk of crime, and our research shows it is definitely worth being as aware of security as you are of the line-up."

He added: "Tents appear to be the main target for thieves, so don't leave them crammed full of all your favourite electronic gadgets when you pop out for breakfast."

It is important to remember that having adequate insurance does not mean you do not have a responsibility to look after your things.

For example, if you leave your possessions on display in a tent and they are pinched, an insurer could argue the theft was due to your failure to take reasonable care.

Are you covered already?

Some home insurance policies include cover for possessions away from the home, but it is important you check this before setting off.

BEWARE: Tents on a festival ground are an easy target for thieves

The personal belongings section of a home insurance policy usually covers everyone who lives permanently at home, so if the policy is in your name but your teenagers are the ones heading off, they might be covered automatically.

"Most home contents insurance policies can offer a degree of cover for your belongings when you're away from your home," said Jeremy Cryer, head of travel at Gocompare.com.

"This can be part of your standard cover or an optional add-on, so check your policy wording to see what protection you may benefit from."

If you do not already have "away from home" cover on your policy, you might need to pay an extra premium to upgrade your cover, and you might also be stung with an administration charge for changing it mid-term.

If you simply want to insure your gadgets, standalone cover for your smartphone or tablet might be a better option. But Mr Cryer said that, as a rule of thumb, buying standalone gadget insurance directly from your phone or network provider was an expensive way of doing it.

How much cash to take?

A music festival might last for only a few days, but it can be expensive. A round of drinks can make serious inroads into your funds, and the cost of T-shirts, souvenirs and other bits and pieces can quickly add up.

"One key tip is to work out what you want to spend before you go," said Steve Rees, managing director of debt consultant Vincent Bond & Co.

"There will be tempting items all over the place, so setting yourself a budget in advance will help you keep out of your overdraft."

It will be cheaper to withdraw your money before you get to the festival site, because once you are there you will probably be charged a fee for each cash-machine withdrawal.

But you need to weigh this against the dangers of carrying too much cash with you – you might be more comfortable paying a little bit extra in return for being able to make some withdrawals. Even then, it makes sense to do some basic planning sense to do some basic planning. "It is normal for festival ATMs to charge about £1.25 per transaction, no matter what you withdraw," said Mr Rees. Don't make too many small withdrawals, in other words.

Heading overseas?

The cancellation of this year's Glastonbury festival led Abta – the travel operators' umbrella group – to say it expected more music lovers to look to continental Europe for their festival fixes. If you fall into this category, you need to add medical insurance to your list.

"If you're travelling to a festival abroad, you don't need to have a serious accident or illness to run up a sizeable medical bill, so make sure you're adequately protected by a suitable travel insurance policy," said Mr Cryer, at Gocompare.

At the very least, take your European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) if you have one. In any country within the European Economic Area, this entitles you to the state medical care available to that country's citizens.

But this is no substitute for proper travel insurance. For starters, bear in mind that the level of care varies from country to country – an EHIC does not guarantee a standard of treatment equal to that provided in the UK, and few countries pay the full cost of medical treatment in the way the NHS does.

Sales and jobs boost creates optimism on our high streets

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

AFTER several years of gloomy forecasts about the future, the traditional high street could be on the way back, according to the latest survey.

According to the Confederation of British Industry, for the first time since February 2003 more stores are recruiting staff than shedding jobs.

Its Distributive Trades Survey indicates that 37 per cent of retailers said they would be employing more workers in the near future, whereas 25 per cent said they may be looking to cut back.

And to back up the brighter prospects for our town and city centres, the British Retail Consortium has stated that employment in the sector has risen for the last two quarters and consumer spending is up on last year, with high hopes for further improvements ahead. Shoppers in two Kent towns said they had noted an increase in footfall.

"I come into Ashford most Friday afternoons," said Christine Collins. "And it has been noticeable over recent weeks there are more shoppers out and about. Also it's more difficult to find space in the car park, which I didn't at the time realise was possibly a good thing.

"But looked at from that angle it does indicate more people are coming to spend their cash – so that's got to be positive for stores."

In Canterbury city centre, shoppers said they felt the summer had brought more people to the shops.

"It's going to be a celebratory few months. We've had the Jubilee, now it's the football [Euro 2012] and then the Olympics," said Michael Austen, "Even if it's only an increase in beer and wine sales, that's still good for business.'

Many pubs and cafés in Kent reported an increase in sales, especially during last month's fine weather.

Overall, retail sales figures were reported to be up 3.4 per cent against the same period last year.

Stephen Robertson, director general of the British Retail Consortium, said: "As the relentlessly difficult underlying conditions continue to make trading tough for retailers, any temporary boost is of even greater importance and retailers had reason to celebrate the eventual arrival of summer at the end of May.

"Much of the month's positive performance can be attributed to spending in the final week, when consumers responded enthusiastically to the sun coming out.

'It's likely the prolonged wet period helped create pent-up demand and people also felt more relaxed about their spending as the sun created a feelgood boost. Small numbers of customers buying jeans and knitwear in the first weeks of May became many more people purchasing skirts, shorts and swimwear by the end of the month.

'Womenswear had its best growth this year, while garden centres enjoyed a boom in the number of people investing in new lawnmowers to tackle overgrown grass.

"The performance of food retailers was more consistent across the month, but again there was a marked change in the type of products customers were buying. Retailers will be hoping the boost continues, sustained by this summer's celebrations and sporting events.

The CBI has also reported that sales volumes rose in May - a finding that surprised its economic-performance analysts.

A total of 43 per cent of retailers recorded an increase in sales volumes. with 213 per cent registering a fall.

These results are the best for 2012 but are still set against a backdrop of uncertainty in retail, with online sales of goods continuing to grow and out-of-town shopping centres taking customers away from the traditional

OUTLET CENTRE CELEBRATES SURGE IN INTEREST

McARTHUR Glen's Ashford Designer Outlet has reported a UK year-onyear increase in sales and footfall for April of 18 per cent and 17.6 per cent respectively.

The outlet, which has discounted brands including Guess, Ted Baker and Kurt Geiger, said the figures reinforced the trend that shoppers were looking for new ways to stretch their pound.

David Maddison, centre manager, said: "With more than 80 designer and premium high-street brands, we are in a strong position to capitalise on the growing number of shoppers looking to buy their favourite brands for up to 60

"Sales for designer collections alone increased by 50.4 per cent year on year, evidence that shoppers are wanting more out of their fashion pound, making more purposeful purchases by buying quality pieces. Nick Bubb, retail analyst at corporate financier Arden Partners, said: "The two strongest trends in retailing at the moment are the strength of the luxury sector and, on the other hand, the strength of the value sector.

"Designer outlets are an attractive combination of both trends, providing the brands consumers want as they make great savings at the same time

Hornby turns a profit from a range of hobbies

THANET-BASED hobby company Hornby has reported a positive set of results for the financial year, which ended in March.

The group reported its turnover as being up 1.7 per cent to £64.4m. The equivalent figure for 2011 was £63.4m.

Underlying profit before tax was £4.5m (2011: £4.4m), with the strongest performances reported in overseas sales.

. However, the owner of Corgi cars and Airfix said its sales of London 2012 merchandise were growing strongly.

THE RIGHT TRACK: Hornby is benefiting from London 2012

There was success with the Moshi Monsters range of pin badges and die-cast vehicles and Star Wars Scalextric, which was launched this year.

Among the other popular ranges were train sets and model kits of British Army vehicles.

Frank Martin, CEO, said: "Despite the backdrop of a challenging market. Hornby is making encouraging progress.

"Our ability to broaden our product and distribution base will enable us to mitigate to some extent any short-term weakness in our traditional hobby sectors.

"We are pleased that sales of our London 2012 merchandise are gathering momentum.

"We expect this unique licence opportunity to contribute positively to profits in the short term and, through the increased distribution that we gain as a result of our involvement with London 2012, to provide an ongoing legacy benefit in substantially increasing our presence in mass-market retail outlets.

"In order to benefit from this increased presence following London 2012 we have developed a number of new ranges, with entry-level price points ranging from £2 to £9.99. The first of these ranges is a series of collectable pinbadges based on the Moshi Monsters licence.

There is no doubt that there will continue to be pressure on consumer confidence for some time to come.

"However, we continue to innovate and to seek new commercial opportunities in order to counter the effects of the macro-economic climate in which we are operating.'

It's no secret that former Army base has new role

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE modernisation of historic Repton Manor is the latest business development to take place in Ashford.

The brainchild of developer Steve Ripley, it is a series of offices housed in what used to be the headquarters of the Intelligence Corps of the British Army.

Many of the actions and decisions taken and planned inside its rooms are still on the Top Secret list but now accountants, webdesigners, estate agents and roofbuilders have taken the place of generals, colonels and brigadiers.

The building itself was a family home before being taken over by the military. It formed part of the Templar Barracks complex, which housed the intelligence arm of the British Army during the 1970s and 1980s.

Brigadier David Reece was based at the corps headquarters and attended the opening of the grand building.

"Initially we were going to use it as an officers' mess, but it was too small," he said. "But it was discreetly situated so made an ideal place for planning sensitive operations.

"I am very proud of what we achieved here and among our achievements is that we left the building intact for future use.

Ripley says he remembers the Army base as being a part of the town in which he grew up, so when the building became available he felt the urge to restore it and bring it back to the forefront of the town.

Working alongside his brother John, Don Murrell and Rebecca Bish as fellow developers, the team spent £230,000 on obtaining the building and a further £500,000 on restoration work.

Now the suites are all occupied. with accountants taking over the ground floor and a satellitenavigation company, estate agents, roof-builders and web-designers upstairs.

Ripley said: "As a development project we thought wouldn't it be great to restore a heritage building and enable it to become a place where people could work.

"All the businesses have started to network among one another, so we hope we have created a new centre and focus for businesses in Ashford. It was always the intention to give something to the town we all grew up in."

The developers now intend to put on displays of military history and to forge links with nearby schools. Bob Davidson, Mayor of Ashford, was at the opening event.

"This is fantastic for Ashford," he said. "The development has attracted top-quality firms by offering affordable rent and rates for prestigious surroundings.'

ACQUISITION

Group is write on with firm move

COLART Group, the world's leading supplier of artists' materials, has acquired Ashford-based Letraset for an undisclosed sum.

The acquisition sees the amalgamation of Letraset's market-leading range of art, craft and graphic marker-pens, such as FlexMarker, ProMarker and Tria Marker, into ColArt's portfolio of fine-art brands.

The company says the acquisition will enable it "to further develop the depth and breadth of Letraset's product range, strengthening ColArt's number-one position in the global marketplace and reinforcing its reputation for supplying innovative products of quality".

Martin Gibbs, managing director of Letraset, said: "Becoming part of such a well-respected group will enable us to compete even more effectively on the world stage.

Thomas Bräutigam, ColArt Group chief executive, said: "Letraset is a great business, with market-leading products that enhance and complement our existing family of brands.'

TRAVEL

Le very busy Shuttle

FOR the first time in its history, Le Shuttle carried more than 10,000 tourist vehicles in a 24-hour period between Folkestone and Coquelles in France.

On Friday, June 1, the cross-Channel service transported 10.380 cars and 128 coaches. The previous record had been set on July 26, 2010, with 9,382 vehicles carried in one day from England to the Continent.

Taking into account the traffic figures for Saturday, which was also extremely busy, and those of Sunday, the service will have carried more than 26,000 tourist vehicles from Folkestone to Coquelles over a threeday period, surpassing the previous record for the equivalent UK peak holiday departure period at the end of July last year.

Jo Willacy, Eurotunnel commercial director, said: "We transported more than 700 vehicles an hour, with a departure every 15 minutes while maintaining punctuality."

New lease of life for SeaFrance as train firm joins with workers' group

EUROTUNNEL has bought three ships from the defunct SeaFrance company and is set to break into the highly-competitive cross-Channel ferry business.

The Berlioz, The Rodin and The Nord Pas-de-Calais are all set to be sailing the Dover-Calais route by the end of this summer following the £60 million deal, approved by the Paris Commercial Court on Monday.

The company will manage the vessels and lease them for operations to a new business to be named Eurotransmanche.

SeaFrance, after a history of problems with its workforce and a number of large-scale bailouts from the French government, went into administration on January 9, 2012.

The new business is expected to create 500 jobs in France and 100 in Kent.

Eurotransmanche has been formed from former SeaFrance employees who will use their redundancy money to finance the running of the company under a deal put into place by unions and the French government.

"Our plan is to manage the ships and leave the independent operation to run them," said a Eurotunnel spokesman. "The workers co-operative will run the ships and this consists of ex-employees of SeaFrance.

Prior to its eventual folding, the French ferryoperator, part of the national railway-operator

SNCF, had experienced problems with militant unions, some of whose members had Communist Party affiliations.

However, Eurotunnel does not see this as an obstacle.

"Back then the company was in the public sector and had a public-sector union," said the spokesman.

"These workers have elected to use their own money to finance the operation, so they will not want it to fail. Also, they have been made redundant once, so they will not want to lose their jobs again.'

The three ships have been out of action for eight months and berthed in French ports. so they will require overhauling to bring them back into operation.

They will also need to have their engines and other equipment brought into line with current EU emissions rules.

Training, courses and careers

Pushing the boat out to help the city's homeless

HOMELESS people can gain a qualification in canoeing in a project backed by Kent County Council.

Called Climb Aboard, it sees seven sessions of river canoeing and a sea kayaking lesson at Grove Ferry resulting in a British Canoe Union 1 Star Award.

On completing the course, participants will be invited to take part in a 40-mile canoe competition on the River Medway.

Richard Barnard, activities worker at homelessness charity Porchlight is running the project.

He said: "Physical activities really help to boost the confidence and life skills of the people we help, many of whom have been through devastating experiences. We really want our service users to gain useful transferable skills that will help them to live independently in the future."

One of those taking part is 19-year-old Dan. He says the efforts of the charity have helped him get his life back on track. He explained: "If it wasn't for Porchlight I'd still be living in a flat that was unfit for human habitation, struggling with managing money, and mixing with the wrong crowd. Now I'm looking forward to getting my own place one day and living more independently.

"The canoeing is a really good opportunity for learning to work as part of a team and for keeping fit. I'm really pleased to be a part of it."

KCC handed over £1,000 funding, and Cllr Graham Gibbens said: "Its work is important to Canterbury and the area that I represent."

Manufacturing a prize to reward bright inventions

A KENT MP has launched an unusual competition to boost ideas for manufacturing.

Gordon Henderson, who represents Swale, said the We Made It competition will work with local schools and industry to help young people understand how exciting and rewarding a career in manufacturing could be.

Students aged between 13 and 16 can submit designs and ideas for a gadget, gizmo, toy or tool they'd like to see made.

It can be any invention, no matter how unusual so long as it is realistic enough to be made. And the very best could be turned in to a reality

The entries will be judged by Mr Henderson and the winner will be entered into a nation-wide competition judged by a group of organisations involved in manufacturing, including Roeing

Later this autumn, Mr Henderson will bring the winner of our local competition to a reception and awards ceremony in Parliament and they'll have the opportunity to meet the heads of the manufacturing organisations involved in the project and learn how to take their career in manufacturing further.

The MP said: "I'm very proud to be supporting this great project to help young people turn their ideas into reality.

"Britain desperately needs more young people aspiring to high-level manufacturing jobs and gain a better understanding of how the industry and businesses involved in it actually works."

A design for success is set to fashion a top job for bright UCA student MOVE over D&G and Gucci, Suzanne Graham is on the way after impressing some of the fashion industry's biggest names.

The fashion student from the University for the Creative Arts was hotly tipped for success at this year's Graduate Fashion Week (GFW) by influential style commentator Hilary Alexander.

Miss Graham studies BA (Hons) fashion design at Rochester.

She has been named 'one to watch' in a feature by the respected fashion journalist for British Airways' in-flight magazine High Life which is seen by more than three million people every month.

As a consequence, she got to show her graduate collection alongside fellow course-mates at GFW at London's Earls Court.

"Hilary's seal of approval has given me a tremendous boost in confidence, which has really helped my final collection become what it is, but now I am really excited about GFW and seeing my designs go down the runway."

Miss Graham's work is inspired by the 'Beggar Prince' of China, a real-life modern tale of a homeless man who became an internet sensation for his good looks and unique bohemian style, which often features women's clothing.

She said: "It is a true life modern fairy tale and tragedy of a man named XiLiGe, also known as Brother Sharp, who lives in China.

"He was a farmer who wanted a different life and so went into the city to find happiness and a career. After a few years he found himself with a wife and child and a lovely home. In a spate of misfortune, he was robbed of his savings and lost his job. Too ashamed to go back home and face his wife, he left everything and went on the streets to beg."

She crafted a genderless collection which uses a mix of fabrics and styles, while the length of clothing is often unconventional

Hilary Alexander said of her: "The first thing that attracted me to Suzanne's work was the story of the Beggar Prince – I was intrigued by the tale and, as I looked through her sketches, I appreciated how cleverly she has translated what might be called 'homeless chic' into a well-thought out casual-wear collection, in terms of shape, silhouette, fabric and colour."

Undergraduate shines like a star as astrophysics paper is published

AN ASTROPHYSICS student has become one of the few to have his personal research published in a recognised journal.

Mark Salisbury, from Sandwich, is part of a group of Open University students to have reached such a prestigious achievement.

Mr Salisbury studied the OU's astrophysics course and went many steps further than most undergraduate students in developing his findings into a full blown academic paper.

It started out as a hobby, but led to the group of undergraduate students writing two ambitious peer-reviewed research papers.

It makes a major contribution towards our understanding of close, interacting binary stars, and of magnetic cycles on rapidly rotating stars.

He said they investigated a particular type of binary star, which is two stars very close together and in the process of interacting.

The students used the OU's remotely operable telescope, PIRATE, to acquire data and interpret this in project progress reports.

It will be published in the Journal of the British Astronomical Association.

Dr Ulrich Kolb, senior lecturer in the department of physical sciences, said: "This is a great example of how OU study can lead to the pinnacle of academic achievement."

Do you care?

Every child who comes into foster care is different.

There is no 'typical' child we place. Many have faced extreme difficulties. Some are from minority ethnic populations. Some have a range of special needs or display challenging behaviour. Some are in sibling groups which need to stay together wherever possible. All are looking for safe, caring homes with people like you.

From drivers to café workers to engineers, we help all sorts of people become foster carers, supporting them to transform the lives of the most vulnerable and neglected children and young people.

Fostering myths busted!

With over a quarter of people considering fostering, but almost 60 per cent mistakenly thinking they're not eligible, we want to bust the myths and tackle the many reasons people don't come forward.

If you've considered fostering - but didn't think you'd be eligible, then think again. You can foster!

- I don't think I'm the right age
- I'm male
- I'm gay
- I don't own my own home
- ▶ I don't have any children
- I'm single
- I haven't worked with children or young people
- I don't think they recruit carers from my ethnicity
- I can't afford to give up work

We believe the most important thing is that a child or young person is taken care of well. We need all types of carers to reflect the types of children and young people who need a place to stay. If you have experience of working with vulnerable young people, and are committed to transforming children and young people's lives, we want to hear from you.

Why choose Action for Children?

We value our foster carers very highly.
Our friendly team will support you, so you can support young people to grow with hope and confidence. We are an experienced UK children's charity who put children at the centre of everything we do. We offer:

- 24-hour support
- ocontinuous training and development
- careful matching
- regular paid breaks when you need them
- competitive allowances and fees
- support groups and social events

Children and young people in your area need foster homes

Could you give children and young people the care and support they need to thrive? If you can offer a safe and caring home, we'll give you excellent training, competitive fees (up to £420 per week), regular planned breaks and 24-hour support.

If you have experience of working with vulnerable young people, a spare room and you're up for the challenges and rewards of transforming a child's life, we want to hear from you.

KENT JOBS FOR KENT YOUNG PEOPLE

Former Tory leader IDS is 'most impressed' on visit to scheme

HE Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has hailed a Kent scheme that has already created 100 apprenticeship opportunities in just a month adding to the 5,000 apprentices already in the county.

lain Duncan Smith made a visit to find out about Kent jobs for Kent's young people – a countywide campaign to galvanise businesses and organisations to hire an apprentice and give unemployed young people the chance to learn and earn.

Kent County Council says the opportunities are there for young people as the weekly cost to employers for taking on an apprentice has been reduced to as little as £52 per week by bringing together national and local subsidies.

At the Maidstone Skills and Community Centre, Mr Duncan Smith spoke to apprentices who have been given a massive opportunity to get a foot on the career ladder and employers who are able to expand their business while training the next generation.

Mr Duncan Smith, known as IDS during his brief tenure as leader of the Conservative Party, said: "Kent jobs for Kent young people is an excellent innovation

"It is binding together a lot of what we are doing nationally with some extra things Kent County Council is able to pay for and initiate – bringing the businesses together and informing them about the apprenticeship programmes we have got and what the subsidies are.

"This is about information, this is about organising and galvanising young people and getting them ready for work."

KCC has invested £2million to help employers give young people the opportunity to work and train in their business. The county's businesses and organisations could be eligible to access grants of £2,000 to take on an apprentice – in some cases, when combined with national funding, businesses stand to receive up to £4,275.

KCC has made tackling youth unemployment one of its top priorities and wants to double the number of apprentices in the public and private sectors from 5,000 to 10,000. April's jobless figures for 18- to 24-year-olds totalled 8,990 in Kent. The recession has hit young people hardest, with the numbers seeking employment doubling over a four-year period.

KCC leader Paul Carter said: "Kent is on the same page as the Coalition government in recognising the risks of a lost generation if we do not tackle youth unemployment.

"lain Duncan Smith gained much from his visit to Kent and was most impressed by the aggressive marketing campaign to wake up the public and private sectors to the opportunities this scheme offers to businesses and young people.

"In Kent we are really on the side of young people and parents. We have invested heavily in vocational education – getting thousands of 14- to 19-year-olds equipped for the world of work.

PARTNERS FOR GROWTH

Cash loan enables firms to expand

A MEDWAY-based online retailer that started as a business run from home but now supplies goods to top stores including Tesco and Argos is expanding thanks to financial help from Medway Council.

24/7 Electrical and sister company Popcorn home shopping have received a £15,000 interest-free Partners For Growth loan to expand into new premises.

The internet-based companies have a stock of more than 40,000 goods, selling everything from batteries to fridge-freezers and fancy-dress and are fulfilling orders for global retailers.

They are owned by entrepreneur Simon Dack, who started working from home in 2003, selling movies and games after quitting a successful career as a regional manager for restaurant chain McDonalds.

Mr Dack said: "I always wanted to do my own thing and although I took a large pay cut and lost the many benefits that came with my career, I knew running my own business was what I wanted to be doing.

"When it all started in 2003, online retail was relatively new, and shopping online was very impersonal. My background and skills are very much focused on service and communications and I wanted to provide the values of a high-street shop online."

The businesses have used their loan to help finance a move to new premises at the Invicta Business Centre, Gillingham, where they have created a modern, open-plan office environment for the team of 17, including five apprentices.

The new premises are low-energy, with plenty of natural light.

"Without the loan there's no way we'd have considered taking the gamble to move to our own premises, renovate them and be the business that we are today," said Mr Dack.

"Now, as well as our warehouse space, we have a place where we can train staff and hold meetings with clients – something that shows a customer that we're professional and impresses them."

The council's Partners For Growth scheme, one of a few of its kind in the South East, offers business loans and grants to help companies start up and develop.

In addition to its loan, the company will also benefit from the council's apprenticeship subsidy scheme GAPs, which offers businesses a £2,000 subsidy to go towards the wage or training costs of an apprentice, and has taken on two young people under the scheme.

Eighteen-year-old Matthew Handley, from Hempstead, has been at the business as an IT apprentice for five months.

"I knew I didn't want to go to university and decided I'd rather gain real hands-on experience while working towards a qualification as well," said Mr Handley. "Working in a small business is particularly good because you feel like you're playing an important role and I've been able to get one-to-one tuition and help."

Lauren Ellis, 20, from Sittingbourne, is two months into her apprenticeship in warehouse and dispatch at the company.

She said: "I'd been looking at apprenticeships for a long time and I thought it sounded like a nice company to be a part of. It's been hard trying to find work, but working here makes me feel worthwhile, like I'm playing an important role in the company."

Medway Council's portfolio holder for strategic development and economic growth, Jane Chitty, said: "It's great to see a business prepared to invest in the future and provide so many exciting opportunities for people.

"I'm delighted that as a council we've been able to support that."

TRAINING

Funding boost to develop nuclear skills

THE Government has announced an investment of more than £920,000 to expand a skills academy for the nuclear industry.

The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills put money from the innovation and growth fund into the training facility, which will be matched by a contribution from business.

The expanded academy will collaborate with the Nuclear Advanced Manufacturing Research Centre (AMRC) and Semta, the Sector Skills Council for Science, Engineering and Manufacturing Technologies. In the first three years, it will take on 3,500 more learners, including more than 500 apprentices.

Energy minister Charles Hendry said: "The nuclear new-build programme and existing decommissioning activities provide a substantial opportunity for UK manufacturers to expand and create highly-skilled jobs.

"This is an excellent example of skills bodies working together to improve the provision of nuclear-related training to ensure the UK workforce can take full advantage of job opportunities.

"Meeting the skills demand for the build programme will be a challenge, and to this end the Nuclear Energy Skills Alliance (NESA) exists to facilitate collaborative working among skills bodies."

Jean Llewellyn, chief executive of the National Skills Academy for Nuclear, said: "The opportunities for the manufacturing supply chain in this area are considerable for the UK alone, running into many millions. Combine this with the global market share manufacturers in the UK could access and the importance of this sector in delivering high-value exports becomes apparent."

APPRENTICESHIPS

Training opportunities for would-be white-collar employees

APPRENTICESHIPS should be more relevant and beneficial for people in Kent, says a body looking into opportunities for young people.

The Financial Skills Partnership has praised a Parliamentary committee for bringing to the fore the debate on the improvement of apprenticeships.

The Committee of Public Accounts has said that a fifth of apprenticeships last less than six weeks and are of no benefit. The report follows a promise from the Government to place greater emphasis on longer and more comprehensive apprenticeships that prepare people for work.

Liz Field, CEO of the Financial Skills Partnership, said: "The apprenticeship is now at a stage where it must evolve to encompass the wider range of careers it can lead people into. Apprenticeships are just as applicable to white-collar jobs as they are to traditional jobs associated with trades and as a result we must take a much more contemporary view of how we deliver apprenticeships in Kent."

FSP has been awarded Government funding to help develop employer-led higherapprenticeship frameworks in banking and insurance, with an initial project creating 270 new opportunities on a par with the first year of a degree as they include exams from the professional institutes in the finance sector.

Major employers are on board, such as HSBC, which will offer opportunities in a variety of roles within its organisation.

IMPORTANT: THIS COMMUNICATION AFFECTS INTERESTS IN PROPERTY FORM OF STATEMENT OF EFFECT OF PARTS II AND III OF THE COMPULSORY PURCHASE (VESTING DECLARATIONS) ACT 1981

THE SHEPWAY DISTRICT COUNCIL (LAND AT DUNSTALL LANE, ST MARY'S BAY)
COMPULSORY PURCHASE ORDER 2011

The Town and Country Planning Act 1990

the Acquisition of Land Act 1981 and the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976

ower to make general vesting declaration

The District Council of Shepway (hereinafter called the "Council") may acquire any of the land described in the Schedule hereto by making a general vesting declaration under section 4 of the Compulsory Purchase (Vesting Declarations) Act 1981. This has the effect, subject to paragraph 4 below, of vesting the land in the Council at the end of the period mentioned in paragraph 2 below. A declaration may not be made before the end of a period of two months from the first publication of a which includes this statement consent in writing of every occupier of the land affected.

Notices concerning general vesting declaration

As soon as may be after the Council make a general vesting declaration, they must serve notice of it on every occupier of any of the land specified in the declaration (except land where there is one of the tenancies described in paragraph 3) and on every person who gives them information relating to the land in pursuance of the invitation contained in any notice. When the service of notices of the general vesting declaration is completed, a further period begins to run. This period, which must not be less than 28 days, will be specified in the declaration. On the first day after the end of this period ("the Vesting Date") the land described in the declaration will, subject to what is said in paragraph 4 vest in the Council together with the right to enter on the land and take possession of it. Every person on whom the Council could have served a notice to treat in respect of his interest in the land (other than a tenant under one of the tenancies described in paragraph 3) will be entitled to claim compensation for the acquisition of his interest in the land, with interest on the compensation from the Vesting Date.

Modifications with respect to certain tenancies

- In the case of certain tenancies, the position stated above is subject to modifications. The modifications apply where the tenancy is either a "minor tenancy", ie. a tenancy for a year or a yearly tenancy or a lesser interest, or "a long tenancy which is about to expire" The latter expression means a tenancy granted for an interest greater than a minor tenancy but having on the Vesting Date a period still to run which is not more than the period specified in the declaration for this purpose (which must be more than a year). In calculating how long a tenancy has still to run, where any option to renew or to terminate it is available to either party, it shall be assumed that the landlord will take every opportunity open to him to terminate the tenancy while the tenant will use every opportunity to retain or renew his interest.
- The modifications are that the Council may not exercise the right of entry referred to in paragraph 2 in respect of land subject to a tenancy described in paragraph 3 unless they first serve notice to treat in respect of the tenancy and then serve every occupier of the land with a notice of their intention to enter and take possession after the period (not less than 14 days from the service of the notice) specified in the notice. The right of entry will be exercisable at the end of that period. The vesting of the land will be subject to the tenancy until the end of that period or until the tenancy comes to an end, whichever happens first.

THE INTERVIEW

Rick Nunn

The Milk keep the party going

S FESTIVAL season approaches, the music world is readying itself once more to admire the greats with all their "one last performance" gigs and also to embrace the new kids on the

Not literally – there won't be any dancing Wahlbergs at Lounge On The Farm – but there will certainly be some stars in the making. None more so than Essex quartet The Milk.

If you have had your finger on the musical pulse for the last couple of years, you will know that The Milk have been around for a little while. But with a new record deal, a debut album and slots on the top summer festival bills, these crazy cats could be about to go viral.

To listen to lead singer Rick Nunn sing, you could be forgiven for thinking you had gone back in time to a Motown soul gig, but in interview his cockney tones reveal his South East roots and love for all things West Ham. And indeed for the music industry.

"It's all about graft. Music is not a lucky game – you've just got to keep at it.

"All the festival line-ups sort of blend into one now, you know? When I was 16, in little bands trying to get signed, you think that behind the VIP security-guarded fence there is some sort of mysterious world of rock'n'roll where everyone is sitting around with guitars inspiring each other. It's really not like that, it's just people getting ready for their shows.

"Yeah, you bump into people, but it's not like in the movies... put it that way."

But the group, described as "party catalysts", are by no means wet behind the ears and are beginning to enjoy their new notoriety.

"It's nice to be associated with some of these big bands, you know. It's nice to just be on the same poster," said Nunn, above left.

"We're doing V Festival this year and I'm psyched about the fact we are on the same poster as The Stone Roses. I could never have imagined that one.

"It's all very surreal getting spotted in the street, but you know, if you don't enjoy it, you're in the wrong game. If you get p off by it, go and be a plumber."

The Milk name influences as diverse as The Prodigy and The Chemical Brothers to Otis

Joe Bill meets the next big thing ahead of their Lounge On The Farm gig

Redding and James Brown. "We're all big dance fans but all big soul players, too. We take the sonic energy from dance music and the groove from soul."

The group also have a very special style in which they perform all of their live gigs.

Rick, 26, said: "We're like live DJs but with instruments rather than decks. The second we start playing, there is no silence for an hour. We keep the beat going, we keep the jams going – all the songs are linked, just like a DJ.

"The idea is that we get people up, that the energy level goes up and everyone is concentrating on having a good time, not necessarily concentrating on applauding us. The best gigs are when the audience is having a great time, and that makes our gig better.

"If you come to a Milk gig, you start to party until the second we're off. We just want to be the catalyst for the evening."

Lounge On The Farm has become a home from home for the boys, who have bagged a slot on the stage for a second year in a row.

"We did Lounge last year before we were signed, had an amazing time and ended up staying two nights. We did the gig the first night and had such a blast that we kept the bus there and partied through the next night. It was just a wicked festival. I remember I spent a lot of time in the silent disco because they let you stay there really late.

"A lot of festivals try to get the family-friendly, bohemian thing, but not a lot of them achieve it. It just ends up being haystacks and a few organic-burger vans and that's about it – there's no real vibe. But Lounge had all the props and managed to get the good vibe in there as well."

Their live sets have made people sit up and take note, with The Milk bagging a nomination for Best Breakthrough Artist at the UK Festival Awards last year, going up against the likes of Bruno Mars and Jessie James.

Nunn is backed by Mitch Ayling on drums and backing vocals, Luke Ayling on bass and Dan Le Gresley on guitar, keyboards and horns.

There is, however, another reason The Milk have become so well known... their artwork. Their website graphics feature the band's torsos with cat heads instead of their own.

"We aren't the graphic designers," said Nunn. "There are a few people that we trust in that department. We just get sent designs and thought 'Bloody hell, that's really clever'.

"When we started out, we wanted to keep it all pretty anonymous, and when you see our website it's all still pretty anonymous, just focusing on the tunes. It was just a cool little gimmick. I get bored of the same band photos all the time – give me something new.

"The cat heads are by no means an alter-ego. We haven't named them – it was just a cool concept that we digged when we saw it."

The Milk's debut album Tales Of The Thames Delta is due out on Monday, September 3, and could feature a collaboration with a star of top TV police series The Wire.

"idris Elba from The Wire is a DJ and rapper, too. We're into our hip-hop as much as soul, but we play the beat rather than spin it on a deck, so working with urban artists is a big thing.

"We will release a couple more singles before the album and keep touring, picking up friends and working as hard as we can."

Continental serves up a treat but sorry service lets the side down

F there is one thing that sets Whitstable aside from many of its competitor seaside towns, it is that you can drive through it and rarely, if at all, catch a glimpse of the sea from which it derives so much of its income and appeal.

In fact the only spot where you can park a car and see the sea, before you reach the grassy slopes of Tankerton, is one of the town's least picturesque viewpoints.

With the industrial shadow of the asphalt and aggregates plant at the harbour looming to the left and the coastline wrapping out of sight to the right, it struggles to inspire.

Yet it is here, just along from the snooker club, that the Hotel Continental is perched.

Its imposing exterior conceals a light and airy interior - large windows allowing the bar to be flooded with natural light – leading through to a raised area and bistro.

It's not renowned as a cheap venue – a hotel room here can set back the weary traveller £185 a night – and a lack of crowds suggests it is struggling to get the locals through the doors.

But is the food up to scratch? The short answer is yes - but it's let down by lack-lustre service that garnished every dish with the feeling that the venue's heart was not in it.

So let's cut to the chase. The service was poor in that not-rude-but-just-failing-to-do-the-littlethings way that defines the great from the good.

The wine is plonked, not poured; the dish on the moules marinière left for the diner to lift and release that all-important breath of herbs and shellfish; the menus - and maybe this is just a personal taste but I suspect not – laminated... and when we added an extra coffee to the final bill (which weighed in at over £80) there was a bit of huffing and puffing. In short, and in this competitive day and age, not good enough.

Which is a pity, as the food bordered on the excellent on occasion. The rack of lamb with a mint-and-artichoke purèe (£17.25) featured tender meat and a purèe that was like a dose of freshness setting your taste buds gambolling over the nearest sun-soaked field. A good blend.

What's more, the pan-fried fillet of salmon with new-potato cake (£15.95) proved a good balance of tastes. Certainly it was an improvement on the moules starter (£6.95). A regular on so many menus now, the ability to overcook mussels seems lost on very few. The sauce in which they were served was lifeless.

Unlike the deep-fried rock oysters (£6.50), which, while suffering from a little too much batter on some, offset the crunch of the batter with the soft meat.

With dessert and wine, the bill rocked up around £84. Yet on a Friday night the place is devoid of atmosphere. And the diner feels more like they are sat in a breakfast room (cornflakes put out ready) than a serious dining venue. A bit more effort and this would be a contender.

Making the roast of your lunchtime

meats, juicy vegetables and plenty of gravy...
is your mouth watering? Of course, we can only be talking about the classic king of dinners, the Sunday roast

It is synonomous with the UK and we've all grown up with the idea of families getting together to enjoy this winning combination.

Its greatness as a meal has travelled overseas as many tourist areas in France and Spain will strategically place the roast dinner on the menu to appease hungry Brits.

But here in Kent we are taking the tradition of the Sunday roast to the next level. We all know it is easy to change a roast in accordance with the seasons. There are the filling vegetables of winter such as Brussels sprouts.

cabbage and parsnips, or the lighter summer offerings like new potatoes, peas and runner beans, but it is the choice of meats here in the Garden of England that has changed the face of the roast.

Gone are the days when lamb, beef, pork or chicken were all that Kent had to offer. Be on the look-out now for roast goose with chilli carrots, roast duck with plum sauce... or even roast woodpigeon!

And let's not forget Kent's glorious coast, which offers up so many sumptuous fish dishes. Along the beaches, our restaurants often promote their freshly-caught cod or plaice – or maybe shellfish are more your thing.

The choice of dishes that Kentish folk can proudly call 'locally sourced' provides an extra joy to our Sunday lunch.

Here are six wonderful places to savour the experience.

The Acorn Inn Birchington

Why here...

The Acorn Inn is a friendly, family-run pub in the heart of the seaside village of Birchington-on-Sea, Thanet. Hosts Peter and Cath offer a warm welcome to a pub that has existed since 1748.

On the menu...

The Acorn's Sunday roast with all the trimmings is very popular. Choose from beef, lamb or turkey. Prices start at £7.95 for one course, £9.95 for two and £11.95 for three. Served midday to 4.30pm.

London Beach

Tenterden

Why here...

The London Beach Country Hotel & Spa in Tenterden offers one of the best Sunday lunches in Kent.

The three-course à la carte menu is only £21.95 and changes weekly. But the real speciality is that the team serves only Kentish produce. The menu is packed with locally-sourced fresh meats, vegetables and cheeses that coincide with the changing seasons. With its picturesque views and warm atmosphere, it is very hard to top.

On the menu...

This top eatery offers a traditional and beautifullypresented menu for Sundayroast diners.

The dishes available include fresh scallops from Rye Bay, which can be followed by wonderful Romney Marsh lamb and finished with a board of local cheeses.

Mortgage lending increase boost for UK homebuyers

THE UK property market showed signs of improvement in April, with Bank of England figures showing mortgage approvals rising to their highest level since January.

Mortgage approvals numbered 51,823 in April, up from 51,067 in March and above analysts' forecasts.

Net mortgage lending grew by £1.139 billion, also above expectations and the biggest increase since January.

Nonetheless, the figures are well below their pre-financial crisis levels, and in real terms property prices are still about 25 per cent lower.

British real-estate developers Telford Homes and St Modwen said the residential property market in the South East remained solid.

There are fluctuations across the country, with areas in the North still perfoming poorly when it comes to house prices.

The uncertainty over the Eurozone is also a problem for the economy as a whole, say forecasters.

School-building conversion receives top marks from housing association convert what was once a Victorian school house in Hythe into a collection of affordable apartments and town houses has been given top marks by housing association Town & Country, which commissioned the scheme.

The development in St Leonard's Road has seen the conversion of the existing single-storey Victorian school building to residential use and the building of new homes in the former playground.

There are 33 new homes in total: 12 maisonettes, 11 town houses and 10 apartments, all of which are available for the local community through Town & Country Housing.

Guy Hollaway Architects designed the project, wanting it to blend with the surrounding area and combining modern architecture with the stone Victorian elevations of the old school house, the character of which has been meticulously preserved.

Matt Whitby, of Guy Hollaway, said: "This was a fantastic scheme to be involved with, as the original historic school building, which has been successfully converted, also provided the inspiration for the design of the new dwellings.

"We are very pleased with the completed scheme, which complements the surrounding vernacular.

Denis Minns, managing director of DBS, said he was delighted with the outcome of the scheme and the positive light in which it had been received

He said: "Regardless of whether a scheme is built for a housing association or not, our level of commitment to build quality and excellence remains high and this has been acknowledged by housing-association schemes time after time.

"Not only are we providing muchneeded homes for the community in this particular scheme but we have also preserved the character of the school house to be enjoyed for generations to come.

"We have enjoyed working with the professionals at Town & Country Housing on this project and welcome additional opportunities to do so in the future.

Be prepared and make the most of the support that's available to you

BUYING your first home is one of the most important moments in your life and there is a healthy number of Government schemes offering people financial help.

HM Revenue & Customs defines you as a first-time buyer if you haven't bought, alone or with others:

an interest in residential property in the UK (except property with less than 21 years left on the lease).

an equivalent interest anywhere in the world.

Some ownership schemes let council or housing-association tenants buy their homes at a discount, if they qualify.

If you can't afford to buy a flat or house, you may be able to get financial help.

There are two types of Home-Buy schemes to help people buy newly-built homes:

■ Equity loan – you get a loan towards the home's purchase price that has no fees for five

■ Shared ownership – you buy a share of your home and pay rent on the remaining share

You will need to take out a mortgage to pay for your share of the home's purchase price.

HomeBuy schemes are a first step to fully owning your home. When you can afford it, you can pay more money, such as through savings or your mortgage, to be able to own your home outright.

Buying a home with family members, friends or a partner can help make home ownership a reality. You'll be able to share the costs of the deposit and the expenses of running a home.

Before you buy, it is recommended you decide how ownership and use of the home will be arranged between everyone who is buying. Think carefully about what will happen if circumstances change - this can help avoid disagreements in the future.

You should get legal advice and draw up an agreement as to how property will be divided in case of:

One of you deciding to give up their share in the property. One of you dying.

Legal ownership of a home can be arranged between two or more people, as joint tenants or tenants in common. The maximum number of legal owners is four.

There are legal and financial rules depending on the form of ownership you choose. For example, if you buy as joint tenants, you can't pass on your share of the property in your will. Instead. it will automatically go to the other joint owners. It is vital you get legal advice from your solicitor or licensed conveyancer before you make a decision.

Make sure your new home is built to last

IF you're buying a newly-built home, there are some key actions you can take to help prevent problems

Find out what you need to do before and after the sale, including getting a warranty and checking the reputation of your builder.

Before buying a newly-built home, it's advisable to check whether your builder is registered with the National House Building Council (NHBC).

You can do this by calling NHBC's helpdesk on 0844 633 1000 or by searching the register on the NHBC

If your builder isn't registered, check that you will be offered cover from another reputable company.

It's also a good idea to:

- check the builder's reputation.
- ask to look around homes that the builder has built before and talk to previous customers.
- take time to understand the cover provided by your warranty.

You should protect your property with a good warranty provided by a reputable company.

Most new homes are protected by the NHBC 10-year Buildmark warranty and insurance. However, some builders use other warranty-providers

- they should be able to give you full details of this.

Local Authority Building Control

(LABC) also provides warranties. You should ensure the final building control certificate is available if the new property is not covered by an NHBC or similar warranty.

Even if the house has a warranty, you should still get insurance. The warranty will only apply to certain problems related to the construction of the building.

Once you have exchanged con-

- get the warranty documents from your solicitor and read them through carefully.
- before taking possession of your home, make sure you inspect it carefully for any defects.
- wait until the home is fully completed before you move in; once you have moved in, check your new home again thoroughly.

WHOOOA! Tony Soprano just went legit.

For those unfamiliar with The Sopranos, the classic series about a Noo Joisey mobster and his dysfunctional family – that's blood relatives and the relatively bloody – I'm stretching a point here about the difference between the first-generation Chrysler 300C and its newly-launched replacement.

OK, Mafioso Tony Soprano never drove a 300C, but he should have done; this beefy chunk of retro-motoring Americana arrived in 2005 and really caught the imagination of British buyers.

It had Mercedes-Benz underpinnings, yet it was cheap and came 'fully loaded' with extras, as the Yanks say, and while there were gasguzzling petrol models on offer, including the monstrous SRT with its obscenely-thirsty V8, the smooth Merc-powered diesel model was the sensible and flexible best-seller by far.

Many soon had their original American-style egg-crate grille swapped for a German aftermarket version that made the car look like a Bentley, and I'm sure we will see these soldier on for years as upmarket private hire cars.

So why the 'Tony Soprano goes legit' comment? Well, the second-generation 300C looks like it had the charm-school education Tony never had; it's smoother and classier to look at and, says Chrysler, far better built and nicer to drive, with a more upmarket cabin – it features redesigned Nappa leather seats and real wood panels on the dashboard.

The edges have been smoothed off, too – probably for the better, yet it still has the muscular Transatlantic look of the original.

It still offers great value against German premium rivals, and Fiat-owned Chrysler has gone for broke and dispensed with offering minority choices: there's no petrol option and only two high-spec trim levels.

Power comes from an all-new 3.0-litre V6 turbodiesel benefiting from Fiat's renowned MultiJet diesel technology, which should deliver good power plus fuel-saving efficiency.

Even in cheaper Limited trim (£35,995), the 300C is well equipped with headline features including Rain Brake Support – to help keep the brake-pads dry for better stopping power in poor conditions – ventilated front seats and heated rears, dual-zone climate control, 8.4-inch touch-screen display, cruise-control, and 18-inch alloys.

Step up to the Executive (£39,995) and you get Blind Spot Monitoring, radar Adaptive Cruise Control – which checks your speed if you start getting too close to the car in front – a two-panel panoramic sunroof and 20-inch alloys.

My only concern is that maybe Chrysler needs to pump-prime demand further with a cheaper entry model; with the array of spec currently on show, there's surely scope for a 'cooking version' that's still choc full of luxuries rivals won't have, and at a more affordable price – hey, let's do a deal the American way.

CHARM SCHOOL: The 300C retains its attitude while also boasting a smoother and classier look

DON'T LIKE

... the fact that there is not a cheaper entry model, but Chrysler may have plans for a midspec, cut-price 300C further down the line

... premium German marques will be quaking in their boots, but some buyers will fancy the 300C looks as a change from Teutonic stereotypes

REALLY LIKE

... the way the bullish looks of the original have been smoothed but not lost. It has that Sopranos look but more clean-cut – more legit www.kentnews.co.uk

Qashqai still leads the way for rival manufacturers to follow

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT MIGHT be named after a small and nomadic Middle Eastern tribe, but the Nissan Qashqai population has exploded since it arrived in 2007

Overnight it created a whole new car segment, the crossover – part family hatchback, part MPV and part SUV – and inspired imitators such as the Peugeot 3008, Hyundai ix35, Skoda Yeti and forthcoming Vauxhall Mokka (see story in First Gear, right).

Even Renault has belatedly recognised its sister brand's star car – it now plans a Qashqaibased model for 2015.

The French marque can only be accused of gawping while Nissan stormed the market – and did wonders for UK exports via production at the highly-efficient Nissan Sunderland plant.

For me, it's still the crossover to beat and it doesn't matter if we are talking about the £16,595 entry model or the £27,000 4x4 because the basic quality and style of the Qashqai cabin shines through whatever the price or extras fitted — even some premium marques don't get this right.

It's also airy, especially when fitted with the panoramic glass roof – optional on mid-range Acenta versions and standard on upmarket N-Tec and Tekna models.

when it

the Oashqui

in 2007 and

has continued

Of course, the driver gets a fabulous view out of this high-riding vehicle, but this so often comes at the cost of blancmange handling.

Not so with the Qashqai, which has uncanny body control yet also soaks up the lumps and bumps brilliantly – a rare delight to drive in the MPV/SUV zone of the market, where later arrivals still fail to reach this benchmark.

The dashboard is well organised, with no irritating foibles and good stowage and everything seems well made and durable; for 4x4 versions there is a simple rotary selector close to the gearshift that offers economical front-wheel

NISSAN QASHQAI 1.6DCI TEKNA: PRICE £26,045

CLASS ACT:

Nissan created a new sector in motoring drive (FWD), Auto – which shifts traction to the rear wheels if a loss of grip is detected at the front – and full 4x4, allowing the transmission to be locked up to split-drive equally between both axles in icy and slippery conditions.

The car responds well and with great refinement in all modes. OK, it hasn't the ground clearance for serious off-roading, but it should deliver most of what country-dwellers need without opting for a much dearer true off-road 'yomper'.

As it is, you'll pay a modest £1,550 premium for a 4x4 Qashqai against its FWD equivalent, but it is only available on hi-spec N-Tec models and above (from £24,395).

Whether Nissan would sell more 4x4s if it offered it on the cheaper Visia and Acenta grades is an interesting point.

Fact is, though, FWD versions far outsell the 4x4s and few buyers will regret the choice since the Qashqai is such a great car to drive.

And it looks even better after a 2010 facelift that smartened the front and tidied up the side

One criticism is how the rear seats don't quite fold fully flat or slide fore and aft to balance legroom against boot space – a feature some customers might seek if weighing the Qashqai's appeal against that of an MPV.

But it is nit-picking against one of the best cars on the market whatever the sector – it has a host of awards to prove it.

In choosing a powertrain, ignore the petrol engines – the 1.6-litre lacks oomph, while the 2.0 is juicy against the diesels.

The small 1.5 dCi diesel is a peach, but you will need the 1.6dCi or 2.0 dCi if you want a 4x4 diesel; the 1.6dCi as tested here is a cracker – sporty and refined and offering an official combined 55.4mpg in manual 4x4 form.

A CVT (continuously variable trasmission) auto box is offered on some engines.

Vauxhall puts the Mokkas on VAUXHALL is going after the popular Nissan Qashqai with the launch of its rival Mokka crossover/small SUV in November, offering both front-wheel drive and 4x4.

Priced from an aggressive £15,995 with sat nav, digital radio and 18-inch alloys as standard, it looks able to tackle an increasingly crowded sector where other potential targets include the Peugeot 3008 and Skoda Yeti.

Third offering of the Audi A3

ORDER books are open for the third generation Audi A3 – deliveries start in September.

Prices for the premium family hatch start at £19,205, with alloys, air con or climate control, premium sound system with integrated iPod selection, and Bluetooth as standard.

Lightweight construction and higher efficiency engines, suggest all models will be cheaper to run than their outgoing equivalents too.

It's all-white for Fiat's 500

FIAT'S hugely popular 500 supermini has passed the 100,000 UK sales mark – just four and a half years since launch.

And those sales reveal some interesting facts, notably that Bossanova White is the most popular colour and 80 per cent have been 1.2-litre petrol models, though the frugal yet racy 0.9-litre TwinAir has been catching up fast since launch in 2010.

Skoda says go Citigo and save cash

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

DOWNSIZING your car is all the rage – economically and ecologically. So it's no wonder the citycar sector is booming.

Value-brand Skoda joined the party this month, adding an all-new and its smallest model to a line-up that is now six-strong.

And while it's rather aptly known as the Citigo, it's one tiny car that can tackle motorways with astonishingly good refinement for its size.

Let's say right away that it does have two major competitors: the VW Up and Seat Mii, basically the same car beneath simple cosmetics inside and out.

While this may smack of badge-engineering from parent group Volkswagen Audi, the potential profit margins on small cars make it a necessity — Toyota, Citroën and Peugeot also collaborated on a city car to produce the rival Aygo, C1 and 107 respectively.

But where Skoda appears to have the edge over its sister brands is in delivering the best value across the range, with a typically generous standard spec and prices from just £7,630 for three-door versions – five-door models cost £350. Finance deals are on offer for as little as £75 a month.

And those who pay the bare minimum won't feel cheated because the Citigo's long-wheelbase/ wheel-at-each-corner format offers a good ride for its size and excellent room front and back while still delivering the best boot space in class.

If you were expecting a catch in the driver-experience department, though, forget it: the Citigo and its sisters deliver lots of fun, with point-and-shoot handling that augurs well for any performance offshoots.

For now, though, power comes from a 60 or 75PS (59 or 74bhp) 1.0-litre three-cylinder 999cc that delivers a frantic thrumming noise typical of the format if you choose to exploit a claimed 0-60mph of around 14-15 seconds, depending on which output you go for and whether you choose the five-speed manual or auto gearbox. But the Citigo is more about saving money than racing around: low CO2 emissions mean that all models attract no road tax in year one and either zero or £20/year thereafter, while the official combined fuel consumption ranges from 62.8 to 68.9mpg depending on model.

It's also a safe small car, with a maximum fivestar Euro NCAP safety rating.

But while economy and safety are vital to costconscious consumers, they will also be impressed by the Citigo's comfort levels for its size and price; the car handles thumps and bumps well and also cruises comfortably.

Three trim levels are offered – S, SE and Elegance – and Skoda-dealers are gearing up to offer a wide range of customisation elements to inject some fun for buyers – expected to be mainly young or families in need of a second car.

One of the most innovative options is the Personal Infotainment Device (PID) – a dashboard-mounted touch-screen technology providing Bluetooth, sat-nav and trip data.

ocal Peugeot dealership Robins & Day in Canterbury, will be taking the wraps off the hotly anticipated new car of 2012, the Peugeot 208, at a series of events at the dealership from Friday 22nd to Thursday, 28th June.

The events will include a 'Ride and Drive' weekend from Saturday 23rd until Sunday, 24th June, where customers will be invited along to be among the first people in the UK to drive the innovative new model, before its nationwide roll-out. Motorists will also be able to see the evolution of the 208 in the dealership, with previous models the 205, 206 and 207 on display.

The dealership will also be fundraising for BBC's Children in Need, the official charity partner for Peugeot in 2012, during the events,

Visitors will be able to take part in a raffle to win a whole host of prizes, including the use of a 208 for a weekend, service and body shop vouchers or a free valet. Little ones will also be entertained with remote controlled car racing.

In addition, Robins & Day will donate £100 to the charity for every new car sold at the dealership and £25 per Deal New or Used for the whole of June.

The new 208 model, which has been on sale in Europe since March of this year, has so far received in excess of 35,000 orders and, just two weeks after launching in the UK, pre-sales soared to more than 1,000.

The design of the 208 creates a model which is light, aerodynamic and very compact. The noticeably increased space inside the vehicle,

Let your body drive in Canterbury with the new Peugeot 208 with more room in the rear seats and a generous boot, makes the vehicle smaller on the outside yet bigger on the inside.

The new model will be available in two distinct body styles – three and five-door – with an extensive range of eight petrol and diesel engines and the latest generation of Stop & Start System (e-HDi) technology.

Tim Franklin, dealer principal at Robins & Day Canterbury commented: "The 208 launch is certainly one of the highlights in the motoring calendar and it's been exciting to share the first glimpse of the new model with our customers. With its unique style, advanced technical features and unique eco-design and benefits, this supermini is set to make a huge impression with motorists in Canterbury."

The Peugeot 208 is also available with Peugeot's innovative Just Add Fuel™ personal finance package, buyers can drive away with three years' fully comprehensive insurance (available from 21 years of age), three years' warranty, three years' servicing and three years' roadside assistance, with single monthly payments starting from just £178.95 per month with a deposit of £1,589.00 (208 Access one-litre, three-door model).

With a competitive pricing strategy, the range starts from just £9,995 for the 1.0-litre VTi Access, £11,695 for the 1.0-litre VTi Active with three-cylinder engine and £18,496 for the 1.6-litre VTi Ice Velvet Limited Edition model.
